BRYN MAWR, PA.

Dearest Mary, I was very sorry you could not come - the doctors were here in full force, the exhibition was a great success and I felt out all that can be got out about Dr. Alice Hall. I have been trying to get a chance to write to you about it all the week, but the school letters have been inexorable and now it is so late I will tell you when I see you and try to snatch a moment to write to Bessie. Mother has just written that Annie is not to return till Bessie does and that Jim Carey says he does not believe Anne intends to marry him at all. I do not suppose this can mean that Bessie is not so well but only that she did not like her companion. Altho. it was, I think, perhaps a false sense of duty yet you shall not miss hearing what I have to say about Normandy and Britteny because you did not come to Bryn Mawr. - Of course

DRY NARR. PA.

I have not seen the original of the report which was sent to you and not even the translation here on file for the exhibition was a good success and I think you had some out about the other things then you to get a chance to write to me about it are to write but the school will have responsible and not it is to be in the year when the year is to be made a moment to write to me about has just written that some is not to return the same day as the year company is not to be taken from I don't intend to say anything about suffer the same thing that I have and so will let you that the old for comparison. I think it is a a fair enough but you state that this having what I have to say about I would not say anything about but not to say anything about

I must see you besides, ^{but} you if we can edge in the time between candidates you must afford a time for a guide book talk. Then we can compare notes when you come back.

You will have to engage a room for Mrs De Vony, ^{but} I believe I will put the complicated directions on another sheet they seem complicated enough for a committee letter. There does not seem much reason for sending this to you except to offer you the services of an unfortunate cicerone and to say that I hope very much we shall have as much time as you can spare in which to see each other before you set sail for Elysium I wonder if Paris and Normandy will seem as nice to you as they seem in memory.

Yours
Minnie C. Sh
