I don't want the bag returned

Merion Hale ⁽¹⁾
B. M. C.

My darling Mother,
The snow is falling fast and I am sitting in a disorderly little study, writing you what I am about to do before I begin to do it. The full sure. Of me, now, like the rest of the students, is interminably studying and raving at the Dean. Our revered president, through the faculty has just ordained that there be proctors to every three people in the coming Exams. We have risen in a body to protest If we are worthy of self government, we are worthy of an honor system during Exams.

Friday we had a mass meeting and drew up a petition requesting that the proctors should be withdrawn for next week and stating that we would pledge our selves to remedy the cheating. The Dean refused to call a meeting of the faculty.

Thereupon the officers of Selg.
Gov., Under grad, and the classes called upon Miss Thomas to ask an explanation why she had not granted our right of appeal. The Dean talked steadily for two hours, and so great is her hypnotism, that the girls felt shaky, till they got out. But she was forced to promise them the honor system for the finals, even though it is too late to change the arrangements for the Midyear's.

Such excitement as this makes us talk steadily all day and leads us to bed pretty tired.

Please don't say anything about this out side the immediate family, because Civil wars are bad for the reputation of the college and everything will probably come out right. We are so angry at "M. Carey's" double dealing that we can't say a nice thing of her. She brought this whole thing to pass by telling the faculty that we wanted proctors, and by telling us that the faculty insisted on it, because we cheated. She has gotten tangled up in her tangled intricate web of lies

To return to more personal matters - The Yette Alumnae is planning a dance for Friday the Sixth, "a dove affair": I am too sure that I want to attend, though I suppose it is my duty.

Elsie Henry's mother is giving a tea or "Kaffee / Katsch" on Saturday the Seventh and she wants me to receive with Elsie

I am longing for Tuesday.
These plagued exams are an awful strain and a week at home would send me down to the ground.

In one of the physiology exams the professor said "Trace your breakfast" and a timid student wrote "I didn't eat any."
Even Uidyears have a funny side Your loving daughter
Anne.
