TALES FROM THE WAR ZONE.

Bryn Mawr Students Get Safely Home.

All around college now we hear the refugees from the war zone telling their experiences. Dagmar Perkins was caught in Interlaken when war was declared. For ten days they could get very little money and practically no news. They finally got to Geneva and from there took the American train to Paris. All along the way between Geneva and Paris trainload after trainload of wounded soldiers passed close by their train. Some were only slightly wounded, and these were anxious to get back to the front. Crowds were at each station where they stopped; old men, women and children, and also soldiers who were waiting to go to the front. She reached Paris after being twenty-eight hours on the train. The day after she reached Paris the Germans dropped the first bombs there. Atala Scudder and Ann Davis were there at the same time. These two left the next day, with about two hundred other people by a special train for Havre, where they were left in the middle of the night. Some French and English soldiers who were quartered there came to their rescue with steamer chairs and rugs, and they spent the rest of the night in the streets with the soldiers keeping guard over them. The next day the U. S. N. armored cruiser Tennessee took them from Havre to Weymouth. The officers gave up their quarters to some of them and the rest slept on deck.

Lois Goodnow, Helen Chase, Molly Boyd and Fredrika Kellogg were in Paris when war was declared. They tried to leave the next day, each one armed with a large suit-case, while the rest of the contents of their steamer trunks were stuffed into large flowered laundry bags, which were slung over their shoulders. They were unsuccessful in their attempt to leave, so they had to comply with the regulations for staying in Paris.

PRESIDENT THOMAS' OPENING SPEECH.

President Thomas made some particular suggestions for the new year before her formal speech. She then welcomed the Freshmen and announced that the Class of 1918 numbers 102. She said she hoped to be with us all the year. She will speak in chapel three times a week. On Friday she said she intends to talk on literature. The subject will be announced a week ahead, so that an opportunity will be given for people to make up their minds as to their own opinions about an author before he is discussed.

The President of the Undergraduate Association, Miss Adrienne Kenyon, was called to the platform to present a check for $2670.41, the proceeds of May Day, to the Bryn Mawr Endowment Fund.

President Thomas began her formal address with a comparison between President Wilson and President Lincoln and by praising President Wilson for his counsels of wisdom, neutrality and moderation. She found one gleam of hope in the horror of the European war. It was that all the colonies of Great Britain are standing loyal because of her fairness in governing them. The destruction of the cathedral of Rheims, and the realization that the fate of other masterpieces depends upon the retreat or advance of armies made her sick at heart.

If wars continue the future generations will be robbed of all the beauties of the French Renaissance, she said. But wars will not continue. This war today will not only be called the most terrible war of history, but also the last great war.

When war times are over for ever, when armament is replaced by arbitration, vast surpluses of money will be left for social benefits. Vice, disease, intemperance and crowded prisons will pass away. The complete emancipation of women will follow. This glorious future calls for every Bryn Mawr girl to use her opportunities.

The Freshmen of this year have given serious reasons for choosing Bryn Mawr for their Alma Mater. One Freshman said she came to Bryn Mawr because she heard "it was impossible to get around the rules of the faculty."

President Thomas went on to say that Freshmen classes always made her sentimental, for she could not help thinking when she talked with them of all their hopes and of the loneliness and sacrifice which their fathers and mothers were often suffering to send them to Bryn Mawr. The Freshmen were advised to start their college work with habits of absolute regularity and punctuality. President Jordan, of Leland Stanford, once said that the way men students keep their academic appointments would lose them any position in the world. The years of intellectual enjoyment are limited only by the tomb.

President Thomas concluded, and advised all the undergraduates to lay now the foundations for these joys and for the greatest joy in life, that of being able to do well whatever one does.

Christian Association Room, Library

The Class of 1915 has brought back to college this fall a spirit of innovation. The whole college, in fact, is throbbing with new plans. The new debating club and the new paper are only two of the new things which will be tried this year. Already the Undergraduate meeting promises to be filled with motions of this kind. The Students' Council, too, will have many suggestions to lay before President Thomas. If we hope our suggestions will have a fair trial, we must on our part be ready to try such plans as President Thomas has suggested to us. One of the first things she said in her opening speech was that this year she hoped we would try to make exchanges in the dining rooms more general. Last year we all remember she wanted us to draw lots for dinner partners for one evening. A sense of fairness, it seems to us, dictates that a general exchange night of this kind should be appointed by the Undergraduate Association for some date during October.

In answer to our correspondent of September 30th, the editors say that President Wilson was Associate Professor of Political Science and History at Bryn Mawr College from 1886 to 1888. Mr. Wilson lived in the house near the Baptist Church on the Gulf road, which is now Mrs. Abernethy's.

There have been placed in the new Book Room a number of books dealing with the countries now at war with each other. These books may be used in the room or taken out. The list will be revised and added to during the year, and it is hoped they will prove of interest. The following books of special interest have recently been added: Prince von Buelow's "Imperial Germany;" Callier's "Germany and the Germans;" Perris' "Germany to the German Emperor;" Usher's "Pan-Germanism;" Schurman's "The Balkan Wars, 1912-13."

GLEE CLUB.

Trials for Glee Club were held Friday evening, October 2, 1914. The following were admitted: First soprano, M. Richards, H. Carrol, C. Westling, F. Johnston, E. Freer; Second soprano, M. Bradway, C. Sargent, M. Chandler, T. Smith; First alto, M. Halle, M. Glenn, H. Wilson, H. East; Second alto, S. Rice, V. Harden, C. Dodge, R. Brandon.

The first meeting of the Glee Club will be held next Thursday evening, October 8, 1914, at 7.45. Trials will be held again from 7.15 to 7.45, just before the meeting. The regular rehearsals of the Glee Club will be on Thursday evenings.

STOP! LOOK AND LISTEN!

Don't make any engagements for Friday evening, October 16th. President Thomas has kindly consented to arrange for a lecture on "Debating," to be held in the chapel. All those who have teams are requested to come, and every one else who is interested is welcome. Bring pencil and paper and take advantage of this chance to learn how. "To speak on your feet," properly and convincingly. There isn't anything any better than debating. It combines a good sporting spirit and the necessity for team-work with keen intellectual activity. There isn't any reason why—if we all work—Bryn Mawr shouldn't challenge Mt. Holyoke and Vassar in a few years and beat them. The old Debating Society has been dropped, and there are to be four class teams, with final inter-class contests in the spring. It does not make any difference whether you have ever debated before or not, most of us have not. Come and help your class win this year, and next year make Varsity and Inter-Collegiate Debate.

Have your class debating captain and manager been elected? If not, see to it that they are chosen at your next class meeting. Don't waste any time, and do not forget Friday evening, October 16th.

RED CROSS.

Are we not going to make a single attempt toward the alleviation of the suffering in Europe? Through our double isolation, physical, because we are citizens of the United States; mental, because of the lack of contact with outside influences due to college life, it is perhaps difficult to appreciate the horror of the situation. Individuals, no doubt, do appreciate it, and are doing all they can, singly, but the concerted action of the college is what is essential.

As a practical means of raising money the class plays at once suggest themselves. If in a crisis like the present so much time and effort were devoted to mere amusement, it would be deplorable. Let us either abolish the class plays and give a general entertainment for the benefit of the Red Cross, or let us have them as usual, but admit more outsiders and charge admission for everybody.

Also the Red Cross has asked for contributions of garments of various kinds, some of which are very easy to make. If every single person in college would regularly spend a little while every single day in sewing we should accomplish an extraordinary amount.

When we stop to consider it, we all realize the great need in which Europe stands, but what we do not perhaps realize is our direct connection with it in that, if we will all co-operate with steady enthusiasm, we may make our share in the work of relief a worthy one. If you will help, go to the Undergraduate meeting on Monday, October 12th, and support the measure concerning the plays, and apply for information about the making of garments to Emily G. Noyes, 60-64, Merion.

Edna Rapallo, 54-58, Merion.

HARVEST HOME.

"Harvest Home" will be celebrated next Sunday, October 11th, at 10.45 A. M., at the Baptist meeting-house, corner of Gulph and Roberts roads. The decorations, consisting of contributions of fruit of field and garden will be sent afterward to the Baptist Orphanage in Philadelphia.

GRADUATE CLUB.

Miss Franklin, Barnard, '13, Fellow in Economics, is acting as provisional President of the Graduate Club for the first few weeks of the Semester. On account of the war there are no German or British scholars this year. Mlle. Tertois, from France, is the only foreign scholar with us.

Two members of the Graduate Club will be elected this month to the Graduate Administrative Committee. This committee is composed of these two members and the Regular Graduate member of the Executive Board of the Self-Government Association. Cases involving graduate students are to be judged by a specially constituted committee composed of the Administrative Committee and the Executive Board and two more members of the Graduate Club who are to be chosen by the Administrative Committee and the Executive Board acting together.

Mrs. Morgan's (Barbara Spofford, '09) book, "The Backward Child," receives the following high commendation among the book reviews in "The Survey": "The book is a tractate on the science of the education of the backward, but it is much more; it is full of practical methods of testing and training. The author has a firm and clear grasp on child psychology and has worked out its principles into a practical method of great value. We should like to see the study of this book made obligatory on every teacher, principal and school superintendent."

ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION.

Graduate Students.—The Graduate Committee for Athletics is: Chairman, Miss d'Evelyn, Rockefeller; Miss Sutton, Pembroke West, Miss D. Brown, East, Miss Donnelly, Denbigh, Miss Trevett. The committee is arranging for hockey practice, and for a tennis team to challenge the undergraduates. Arrangements for swimming, basketball and all other athletics are made by the committee, including the weekly gymnastic class.

Outdoor Manager.—Whenever any captains want the grounds rolled and marked, will they please let M. Branston know. make any unreasonable requests of the Business Manager.

When a yellow flag is flying on the campus the athletic fields may not be used.

Indoor Manager.—E. Dessau, '15, has been elected in place of E. Dougherty, who has not returned to college.

Authorization for swimming will be held every Tuesday and Thursday night at 9 o'clock until further notice.

Tennis.—Tennis courts are reserved for tournament players, but may be used by any class at other times.

The inter-class singles tennis tournament begins October 14th. Every one who goes down to watch the games is requested by the captains to be as quiet as possible. Any sort of noise, and especially comment on the play, is very disturbing to the players.

1916.—I don't want to bubble with enthusiasm or do anything unpleasant like that. I don't want to make noble appeals to the pride and loyalty of the class and call to them with all the flowers of rhetoric at my command to make one last splendid stand. No; all I want to say, 1916, is that through the years that we have been at college we have never won anything worth speaking of in athletics. We have lost, not because we have not had good material, good coaching and good opportunities, but because we lack the will to win. Play for play's sake is all very well. We lose, and it is all right, because the game was fun to play. But that feeling must not be carried too far. A game is also meant to be won, if it is gone into at all seriously, in order to show that you have any backbone. You can't win merely by looking pathetic and wishing you might. In order to win you will have to work, make sacrifices of time and thought, be a bit practical and arrange things so that they will not interfere with practice. Work with one idea, to turn out a winning team. Some of you will find an appeal in these words; others less excited naturally over the prospect of sweating on the athletic field will say, "It makes no difference to me; let those who want to go and play, but why should I bother myself?" Only because without you we shall not stand so fair a chance of winning, and then our class, and you along with it, will have earned the name of "spineless." And a true name it will be, too. It is spineless not to want to exert yourself, not to be willing to work body and soul, not to be able to win. This year in tennis let us try for better things. We have lost some of our best players and we need material. If you play, come out and try for the team; do not worry about not being good enough—only the excruciatingly bad would not be good enough when measured to the standard kept by 1916 today. C. Fuller. 1918.—Turle has been elected tennis representative.

PARADE NIGHT.

Freshmen Parade Night was even a greater success this year than ever before because of the very effective use of fireworks. The costumes made up by former classes were generally not as well appreciated, since it was difficult to tell in the darkness whether Sophomores were supposed to be witches, devils or strange beasts. The big bonfire on the lower hockey field, in which Freshie was burned in effigy, and the splendid display of Roman candles were really far more appropriate.

A. Werner, '16, and R. Alden, '16, lead the Freshmen line. The tune played by our friends, the Bryn Mawr band, was the Harvard song, "Marching Down the Street." The Sophomores had their parody ready. The story goes that a member of '17 said to a Freshman, "I wasn't in class meeting yesterday. What is our Parade Night tune?" And what could a poor Freshman do?

FRESHMAN SONG.

Tune—"Marching Down the Street."

See how the Freshmen gather here,
Singing the praises of our sister class,
Who always uphold us, always are near,
And give us a cheery word as they pass.

Then all together loyal stand
And cheer again for old Bryn Mawr.
Oh! hear this refrain as it carries along,
As it carries along.

CHORUS:

Behold they come in view,
Who wear the dark blue hue,
Whose hearts are strong,
Whose hearts are true,
Ever to Bryn Mawr,
Ever to Bryn Mawr.

E. Atherton, '18.

SOPHOMORE PARODY.

Look at them straggling into view,
Bawling for home with loud boohoo!
Poor little Freshman so new,
Inside and outside they're died dark blue.
See how they shrink before the red,
Falling away in reverent dread.
Why all these tears?
Poor little dears!
Oh, they should be in bed.
Behold each tiny maid
Marching on parade.
Your song is weak,
Your voices squeak,
O 1918! O 1918!

H. Harris, '16.
H. Allport, '16.

SOPHOMORE SONG.

Tune—"The Bells of Hell."

O Fresh! O Fresh! O Freshie Freshmen!
We know you're feeling blue,
You can't withstand the mighty Soph's attack
When you wear that dismal hue.
We're sorry to leave you so very far behind.
Take bravely your defeat,
For the Sophomore red is equaled only by the green,
And it simply can't be beat!

H. Harris, '16.
