Maids, Porters Present Plays In Annual Show

Trifles Lacks Subtlety; Chekhov Play Reveals Lighter Touch

by Jean Ellis '49

Trifles by Susan Glaspell, the first of two one-act plays presented by the Maids and Porters in Goodhart last Friday evening, provided entertainment which was adequate although not exceptional. The other play, The Proposal by Anton Chekhov, was a more polished and a genuinely better production.

The first presentation seemed to be an overly ambitious undertaking. The plot is concerned with the strange death of Farmer Wright and the inquiry which follows. The County Attorney and Sheriff have returned to the Wright farmhouse in an attempt to secure evidence to be presented at Mrs. Wright's trial for murder. The only piece of information which could lead to an accusation is hidden by Mrs. Peters, the sheriff's wife, and Mrs. Hale, a neighbor overwhelmed by sympathy for the misunderstood and lonely wife of Farmer Wright. The subtle treatment which the action of Trifles requires was not achieved and the play therefore became comic.

Louise Jones as the repentant neighbor turned in an excellent performance, maintaining a fairly even interpretation of her role. Carl Smith as Hale delivered his account of the discovery of the dead man with great poise and would have provided good comic relief had the audience interpreted the rest of the play correctly. Pearl Edmunds as Mrs. Peters was efficient and practical though superficial. Barbara Draper and Louis White as the Attorney and the Sheriff respectively gave good support to the rest of the cast.

The Proposal, on the other hand, was a light comedy dealing with the difficulties which confront Ivan Lumov (a hypochondriac of convenience) when he attempts to propose to Natalia Tschubukov, the

Dean Broughton Explains Rules Of Written Work

Goodhart, April 25. At the request of the Judicial Committee of the Senate, Dean Broughton explained in detail the Senate regulations concerning written work in a special college assembly. She pointed out the necessity of making every section of these rules clear to each student in order to maintain the standards expected at Bryn Mawr.

Viteles Describes Industrial Psych. To Science Club

Park, April 28. — "Industrial Psychology is a broad field—so broad that I hesitate to define it," stated Dr. Morris Viteles, of the University of Pennsylvania, in his lecture to the Science Club. He went on to say that the chief purpose of industrial psychology is to promote the main objectives of industry. This can only be accomplished through the worker himself. His individual efficiency, satisfaction in his job and relations with his employer are therefore of extreme importance. Psychology can be of great importance in the elimination of fatigue, methods of supervision and the selection of competent workers. It was to this last field that Dr. Viteles limited the rest of his discussion.

With the development of complex modern machines, it was first thought that the need for highly intelligent workers would be eliminated. Actually the need for special skills in these workers was even greater. This fact was brought out clearly during the war when highly complicated weapons were developed. Dr. Viteles mentioned anti-submarine warfare, a field in which he himself did research, as an example of this. Only workers with good pitch-discrimination were found able to do this work.

Coming back to industry, Dr. Viteles showed that the same situation prevailed. "Selection of workers in the past," he said, "has been

Legislative Body Clarifies Clause on Responsibility

The Legislative Body of the Self-Government Association met in the Common Room, Monday, April 28, to discuss the interpretation of the Constitution and Resolutions and the possibility of rewording certain sections. It has been felt that the clauses concerning the individual's responsibility as a member of the association are not explicit. Thus, the discussion focused on the issue: Is the student, by virtue of her membership in an organization, obligated to maintain an awareness of the rules in other members as well as herself?

It was unanimously voted by the Legislative Body that the wording of the Constitution be changed for clarification since the present wording has been questioned. The recent ballot of the Self-Government Association, stating that each member is responsible for "seeing" that rules are obeyed, was felt to be too nebulous. The question was whether only Board members are responsible, or whether every student should take on responsibility of seeing that the rules are obeyed.

After discussing various specific problems concerning the changing of the clause in question (Resolutions, VI), the group voted:

"1. Each member of the Association is on her honor to carry out the rules of the Association.

Forster to Read At Eng. Lecture

On Wednesday, May 7th, E. M. Forster, noted English novelist, will give the annual English lecture in the Common Room at 8:30. Mr. Forster will read from his own works, selecting several passages to illustrate a particular theme and making informal comments afterwards.

"Mr. Forster," stated Miss Woodworth, of the English Department, "is the most distinguished living novelist of our time, best known for his Passage to India, and Howard's End." A new collection of Mr. Forster's supernatural stories is being published this year by Harcourt Brace.

The wide-spread interest that Mr. Forster has created in this country, both by his writing and by his critical work, has been increased by the news of his approaching arrival in America to take part in a symposium on music at Harvard. There will be an informal discussion and a chance to meet Mr. Forster after his talk.

Hinchman Winner Will Do Honors In History Field

Elizabeth Anne McClure, winner of the Charles S. Hinchman Memorial Scholarship, received this award for her work in history. It is given annually to a member of the junior class for work of special excellence in her major subject.

Next year Betts McClure plans to do honors work in history. Her courses in the department this year include Northern Renaissance History and Continental History. She also takes the Interdepartmental course given in the Theory and Practice of Democracy.

This spring Betts has been appointed the new head of the Chapel Committee. She has also been active in organizing the work for CARE on campus in connection with the Alliance. Betts was prepared by the Baldwin School, Bryn Mawr, Pennsylvania, and is from Collegeville, Pennsylvania. She is an Alumnae Regional Scholar.

Hart Brings Throng to Maypole For Heartening News of Movies

Mayday morning found the usual eager throng gathered about the Maypole, anxiously awaiting the words of supreme wisdom which annually fall from the lips of the President of the Senior Class. The early hour deterred few, Alice Hart herself seemed in rare form, which might be accounted for by the fact that she has been warming up to the task of writing a Mayday speech by dashing off an honors paper.

Miss Hart began her talk in a manner filled with serenity:

"Good morning . . . you're looking lovely this morning. Who's your embalmer?"

Once these formalities were dispensed with, Miss Hart got down to more serious topics, firmly avowing that there would be no mention of the word Mayday. The turnout of the student body was a subject for consideration.

"The best we can say is that Bryn Mawr is 44 and 99/100 per cent—here. The other 55 and

by Helen Martin '49

The crowds came and the crowds stayed, the surest sign that the Sophomore Carnival was a complete success. The plaid-vested, leather-tongued barkers, who set out in the ubiquitous jeep to advertise "food, fun, and bee-yootiful women" to the Vill, Haverford College and points between, did not over-estimate their wares. The carnival-goers emptied their pockets freely to boost the profits for the Alumnae Drive.

Finger-crossing averted the rains, but not the high winds early in the morning, so Chairman Margo Vorys and Randy Bell, Construction chairman, effected, with their crews, a complete removal of the Carnival from Merion Green to the more sheltered Pem Green. Here the food booths were set up, and the games ranged from darts to ring-a-duck. A fortune teller presided under the shadow of Taylor tower, and a portable Gay Nineties snapshot establishment moved from spot to spot. The duck pen in the middle of the Green held an especial fascination for the under-twelve contingent, who also were both startled and charmed by the bike-riding Teddy bear as he meandered about with a coke bottle.

The wild woman, an exchange student from Southern Borneo, was the prime attraction of the sideshow, clad in a scant leopard skin. She looked like something you would see lurking around Bryn Mawr the night before midyears. With her were a host of other belles: the red-bearded lady, the long-head lady who contracts jumbo-sized hangers, the snake charmer, the intellectual tattooed lady, and the fat lady, who again looks like something you've seen before, say, at the Inn. Five Can-Can girls glittered through their one-two-three kicks, with considerable poise, notwithstanding the quavering flats which threatened to squelch the act. A joyous inter-

B. M. Steps Out

Last weekend has proved that books and papers can be pleasantly, if temporarily, dismissed, in favor of festivities ranging from one-act plays Friday night to picnics and lemonade Sunday afternoon, highlighted by the near-professional Sophomore Carnival and the gay Junior Prom.

Congratulations are due the well-coordinated committees which worked hard and intelligently to arrange an entire weekend program. For the first time Bryn Mawr had what could actually be termed a Weekend, instead of an isolated evening into which too much is jammed. A dance should be a dance, not an epilogue to a play.

Perhaps we can place, along with Princeton Houseparties, Yale Junior Prom, Cornell Spring Day, and Wellesley Junior Show, the Bryn Mawr Junior Prom Weekend. Let us hope that the weekend this year will set a precedent for the future.

Marshall's Speech

Cold, hard facts unadorned by political ambiguities are hard to take. Secretary of State Marshall's speech made us realize that peace will be difficult, but not impossible, to achieve. Now that we have a clear picture of the aims of other nations, we can approach future peace meetings more objectively and intelligently.

On the surface, the conference seems to have accomplished little. Certainly, there were no material gains on the German and Austrian treaties, but Stalin is confident that agreement can be reached after protracted negotiation. Marshall warned that time is running out for German and European settlement, that Russia has time as a weapon on her side. Therefore, the United States must take immediate action.

Molotov and Marshall are both unyielding bargainers. Neither made any major concessions. Marshall's speech emphasized the clash of Eastern and Western ideas. It is these differences between political and economic democracy which are causing the deadlock. It remains to be seen whether the brutal frankness and disagreement at the Moscow Conference will lead to discord or to compromise in the peace.

We must not be disgusted nor too impatient with the peace conference, remembering that treaties have never been made in a day, but, on the other hand, we must realize the situation is serious and ought not to be hampered by avoidable delays.

Current Events

Common Room, Monday, April 28: "The great hope of the British lies in the establishment of a strong world security which will allow her to develop her resources and abilities", said Mr. Conyers Read, English history author and authority speaking on "Post War Problems of the British Empire."

Two of the major problems of England are those of a domestic and empiric nature. During the last quarter of the nineteenth century Britain accepted a free world economy and adopted a pattern of effort to establish this economy and create a balance of trade—crucial problem of England. Mr. Read stated three ways in which England had previously balanced her exports with her imports: First, she made large investments all over the world, including Argentina and Malay, from which she got substantial income; second, she became the world's banker; third, she became the world's insurance company.

Another important point that Mr. Read emphasized was the "complementary pattern" of trade with her dominions—i. e. she exchanged manufactured goods with Australia in return for raw materials. Great Britain in this way obtained fifty percent of her food and much of her raw materials, but today, as a result of the war, her balance of trade is very unfavorable. She owes a great deal of money in interest and loans, and to financiers of many campaigns. Her "invisible exports" have stopped and the "complementary trade pacts" are rapidly vanishing for those smaller nations have not succeeded in manufacturing their own products and consequently have erected tariff walls to protect their own manufacturing.

In addition to trade Mr. Read spoke of three problems which must be directly and immediately dealt with by the British: the lack of coal to produce power which is essential to manufacturing, the shortage of manpower and the obsolescence of British equipment for the whole of British industry.

Broughton Clarifies Rules on Plagiarism

Mrs. Broughton emphasized particularly Section II, which is concerned with written work other than examinations:

"All other written work also must be done absolutely independently, except in so far as permission may be given by instructors for students to work together or for students to use reference works. Quotations must be clearly indicated . . .

"In cases of doubt students should ask instructors, and instructors are requested to be definite and explicit in stating what they permit."

To further clarify these regulations, Mrs. Broughton quoted from the instructions accompanying the Freshman English footnote sheet: "Any unacknowledged use of source material is considered plagiarism". It is her opinion that danger of plagiarism arises from improper use of reading notes. In summarizing or condensing a passage from a book, it is essential to make a note of the page number in order to avoid incorporating such a summary into a paper without a footnote, particularly in the event of a lapse of time between the taking and use of notes.

Finally, Mrs. Broughton reminded the college of the Senate penalty for any infringement of these regulations:

"The penalty shall be a cancellation of a part or all of the use of such cancellation together with suspension from College or exclusion from the College."

Hartshorne Probes 'Divine Relativity'

Common Room, April 28: "In the past, God has usually been connected with the idea of absoluteness," stated Dr. Charles Hartshorne, prefacing his talk to the Philosophy Club on the "Divine Relativity". Dr. Hartshorne, who is Professor of Philosophy at the University of Chicago, feels that God must be considered contingent in some respects, however, since, as an omniscient Being, He is affected by the contingent world which He knows.

Dr. Hartshorne discussed the weak and the strong senses of relativity. The weak sense implies relativity in some relationships, while the strong sense implies relativity in all relationships. Thus, in connection with God, two statements can be made. "God knows all things" refers to his absolute, or abstract character, and does not imply the specific instances of his knowledge. "God knows that there are men", on the other hand, is an intrinsic relationship. Thus, God must also have a concrete nature, dependant on his knowledge which varies, while His omniscient remains constant. According to Dr. Hartshorne's concept of God, He is both relative and absolute.

There are in all, he stated, three possibilities. First, that relations are external to their terms. However, he objected, there must then be a relation between the term and the relation. And, if relations are external to all terms, then they are really terms themselves.

The second possibility, declared Dr. Hartshorne, would be that relations are internal to all terms. However, in this case, there would be no opportunity to consider the same term with different relations, and all analyses would necessarily be false.

The third position, upheld by Dr. Hartshorne himself, is an intermediate one. "Relations are internal to some terms," he feels, "and external to others." Therefore, in respect to any given relation, there would be both absolute and relative terms.

May Queen's Speech Reviews B. M. Movie

lor clock. They were shooting Taylor in the morning. Hours not to reason why . . ."

The Senior President explained that the motion picture experts had found some satisfactory subjects on the athletic field—"at least there's SOME action there—nobody else even moves unless it's for credit." The movie men seemed to suffer from certain misinformation:

"They tried to get a shot of the bustling activity in the library; the photographers waited for a good, active scene. Yesterday a relief crew was sent down to the men who'd been there for 3 days without food or water. The expedition was led by a St. Bernard who, we hear, was named Herben . . ."

In concluding her speech Miss Hart announced the summer shooting schedule: "The first is a biography: THE LIFE OF S. J. HERBEN OR THE BEAVER WHO DIDN'T GIVE A DAM. Then we have a documentary film: TEN YEARS IN THE SOUTH SEAS OR WRECKED ON A REEFER. Next a sensational thriller: THE DIVER'S DELIGHT or 20,000 LEGS UNDER THE SEA. Now we have a philosophical production: AN EVENING OF BRIDGE OR DEAL OUT DES CARTES, I SIMPLY KANT,

Miss Hart cautioned us to watch for these pictures and then: "Roll, do not run to the nearest hoop, as one little hoop said to the other little hoop, 'Roll me over, in the clover.'"

Summer Credits Clarified by Dean

Students contemplating summer school work for which they wish college credit should keep in mind the basis on which transfer credit is granted: 1) the institution must be in the list of approved universities and colleges, as issued by the Association of American Universities; 2) the courses must be comparable to work given at Bryn Mawr College; 3) the courses must not repeat or duplicate work offered for admission or taken at Bryn Mawr College.

Hour-for-hour credit will be given for acceptable courses taken at acceptable institutions; the institution's own evaluation of the semester-hour value of its course will be taken. No credit will be given for less than one-half unit of work, or four semester hours.

To be sure that these three requirements are met, the student must consult the Dean concerning the institution and her plan of summer work, and the Recorder concerning the hour-for-hour credit. If the courses are in the major or allied fields, or are to meet Bryn Mawr requirements, they must be specifically approved in advance by the corresponding department here. Forms called "Approval for transfer credit" are available in the Dean's Office, and must be filled out in detail and signed by the Dean and the departments, and turned in at the Recorder's Office.

It should be noted that courses taken elsewhere which have received a grade below C will not be accepted for transfer credit.

Legislature Meets, Studies Constitution

"2. Each member of the Association is responsible for seeing that others carry out rules and she may report infractions at her discretion." This new wording will replace the present clause in the Constitution. The Legislative Body also recommended that the students be made thoroughly conscious of their function in the Association.

The Legislature may be called to convene by either two of its members or by the President of the Self-Government Association. Legislative powers are delegated to this representative group upon its convention.

Royal Pair Solemnly Crowned in Underwater Setting of Prom

by Irina Nelidow '50

On Saturday night the gym was transformed into a magic underwater kingdom, complete with lovely mermaids, shimmering fishes, and a gigantic and extremely contented-looking whale. Neptune was there also in full array, and hidden away in a corner, Davy Jones' locker gave the proper nautical touch. In these marine surroundings Larry Miller's band played soft or jazzy music almost continuously. The brief intermission featured the high spot of the evening, the crowning of the Prom King and Queen.

With due solemnity the dancing couples formed an aisle, up which marched Meggy Urban and Dr. Nahm to be formally crowned Queen and King of the Junior Prom by Margo Vorys, chairman of the Sophomore Carnival. Bedecked with flowers, the royal couple then gave a brief exhibition waltz, which was loudly applauded by all.

Festivities had begun earlier in the afternoon with the Pembroke-Rhoads tea dance from 4 to 6 in the Rhoads smoker. Here Hollywood reigned supreme, as amid blazing lights movies were taken of the dancers.

Sunday featured the Merion picnic at Saunder's Barn. A jeep ferried over many picnickers (there were about 30) except the three individualists who preferred to bicycle. Hamburgers, potato salad and ice cream in between sticky buns made up the bulk of the menu, a feast which put a gala finishing touch to the most festive of all weekends.

Hoon Analyzes False Prophecy

Music Room, April 27.—"The Relation of Religion to the Contemporary World" was the subject of the address given at the chapel service directed by Dr. Paul Waitman Hoon, Rector of the First Methodist Church of Germantown.

Dr. Hoon based his sermon on the fourth chapter of the book of John, particularly on the verse which says "Beloved, believe not every spirit, but try the spirits whether they are of God: because many false prophets are gone out into the world." Saying that our task was to hold steady in the swiftly changing circumstances of our world, he felt that we must "try the spirits" to win the ideal we seek.

The spirit of nationalism was analyzed as a false prophet which we have been unable to shake off even in our cessations to internationalism. Dr. Hoon pointed out the many aspects of nationalism which have marked the struggles of our time.

Dr. Hoon commented on the fact that American pride in the education of intelligence has produced in quantity rather than in quality, "setting thirty million college graduates loose in the country." In criticism of rationalism, he said that the mind of man signifies more than reason in its will and faith. Morality, too, is the business of rationalism and the sanctions of morality are found only in God.

B. M. Represented At Athletic Conf.

Elizabeth Bagley '48, President of the A. A., represented Bryn Mawr at the eleventh National Convention of the Athletic Federation of College Women, which was held on April 18-20 at the Women's College of the University of North Carolina. The purpose of the AFCW as stated in its constitution is "to further athletic interests and activities for girls and women according to the highest and soundest standards of sports and recreation." Any college or university having an A. A. with a written constitution and student officers is admitted to membership. At this national convention, the first since 1942, there were representatives from 126 colleges and universities in 35 states.

There were speeches by outstanding Physical Education leaders, and much discussion, in the group as a whole and in smaller groups divided according to the type of college and the problems of the A. A. In the large group one of the main topics discussed was that of competition: while everyone agreed that you play to win in athletics, the consensus of opinion was that varsity competition is, in most cases, not a good thing, since much time and money are concentrated on a small group. Intramural competition in the form of interhall and interclass games was felt to be the most important thing in an athletic program, since more people are able to participate and more interest is aroused. Extramural competition should be an outgrowth of a good intramural system, so that the especially skilled people have a chance to play others of equal ability. Libby hopes that next year we can have a sounder and more comprehensive intramural program and that everyone will also take advantage of the informal recreation such as Open Night in the gym and the Sunday swimming.

In the smaller discussion group, composed of representatives of women's colleges, all the problems common to their A. A.'s were discussed. Much interesting and worthwhile information was disclosed on subjects as point systems, publicity, sports managers, finance and organization, which will be helpful when the A. A. Council revises the constitution next fall.

On the whole, the conference was a success, said Libby Bagley, who feels that it yielded much that will be useful to the A. A. at Bryn Mawr.

Princeton Tigers To Debate B. M.

The pros and cons of the delicate question: "Are Women Domineering?" will be aired on Tuesday, May 6, when the Princeton Debating team will invade Bryn Mawr for the second time. The debate will be held in the Common Room at 8:00, with 25 cents admission for the benefit of the Drive.

The panel of experts will include Margie Low, '50, and Pam Stillman, '49, for Bryn Mawr, Warren and Nixon for the Tigers, with either Collier, of Princeton, or Phyl Bolton, '49, acting as moderator.

The Bryn Mawr Debate team recently participated in the ten-college Benjamin Franklin Debate Conference held in Princeton, April 18 and 19. There, Phyl Bolton, '49, and Betsy Curran, '49, for the affirmative; Hanna Holborn and Marjie Low, '50, for the negative each debated five teams. The subject was "Resolved: Labor should have a direct share in management." The hitherto "unconquering" Bryn Mawr team, reports Pam Stillman, new head of the club, came in fourth in the contest, winning five of its debates.

lude to hold the attention of the audience clustered about on the grass was the act of the barber-shop quartet, a superlative group of songsters who handled with equal ease the shaving mugs and "Oh You Beautiful Doll."

Revellers left the Carnival with balloons, ice cream and a strange assortment of prizes; the gentlemen proudly bore off the bargains of the day, hand-painted neckties, and left the weary sophomore class a clean-up job, and over two hundred dollars for the Drive.

SDA Holds First Campus Meeting

Led by Pamela Stillman, '49, and Marjorie Low, '50, the Bryn Mawr chapter of the SDA held its inaugural meeting on Wednesday, April 23. The constitution of the national organization was read, as well as its four basic principles, which are as follows:

1. We dedicate ourselves as an organization of progressive students to the achievement of freedom and economic security for all people everywhere through education and political action.

2. We believe that rising standards of living and lasting peace can be attained by democratic planning, enlargement of fundamental liberties and international co-operation.

3. We believe that these objectives can be attained only if the wealth and power of the organized forces of reaction are overcome by political action in accordance with democratic principle.

4. We believe that communism, like all forms of totalitarianism, is incompatible with these objectives. In our crusade for an expanding democracy and against fascism and reaction, we therefore welcome as members of SDA only those whose devotion to its principles is unqualified."

The next meeting of the SDA, which will henceforth hold weekly meetings, will decide upon a constitution and a future program. Officers will be elected and the constitution ratified.

according to common sense methods." This method, utilizing the interview, references, etc., has not been supplanted, but merely supplemented by psychological tests.

Better results are obtained when tests are used. Dr. Viteles showed several slides of graphs illustrating the great increase in the percentage of workers who proved satisfactory in their jobs, when psychological tests are applied in their selection.

These tests are, of course, not 100 per cent dependable. They merely increase the chance of good selection. From these tests, it can be calculated accurately how many workers must be hired in order to have a desired number left at the end of a training period.

America's foremost authority on young people's problems

Here's a perfectly strange man looking you in the eye. You've been introduced...but it's up to you to carry on from there. Maybe your go-between threw in some clues along with your names. Maybe you're exposed to each other without benefit of life-lines. What on earth is there to say to this man?

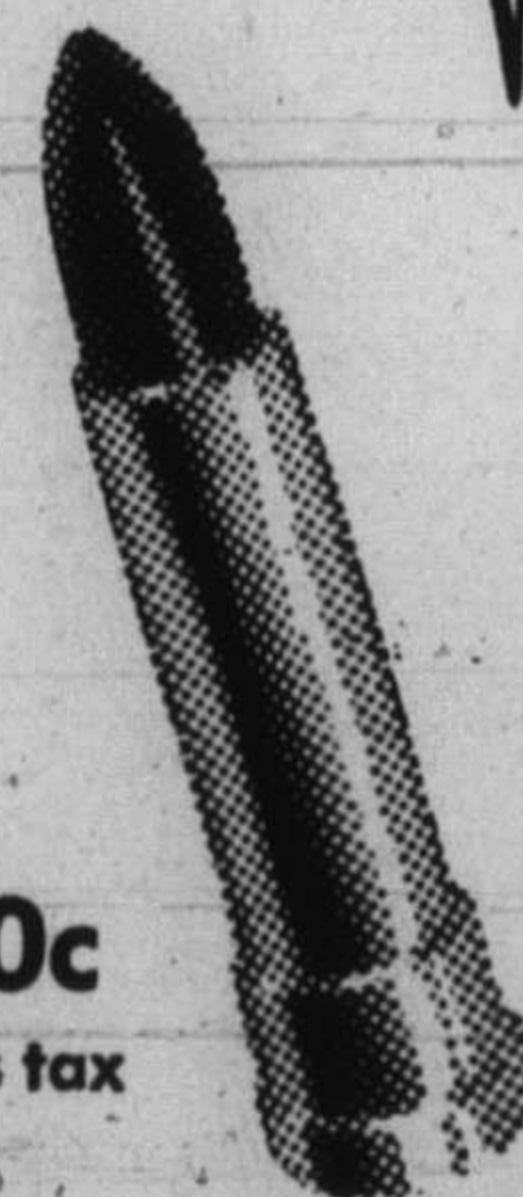

The thought panics some of you into sticky silences. You grin sheepishly at him, wishing with your whole heart he'd hurl an opener at you. But maybe he thinks ladies should make the opening gambit. So it could be a draw...

with each of you muffing your chances of making an impression on the other. But it needn't...when it's so easy to start the ball rolling.

What is there to talk about? People are the liveliest topic. "Do you know...?" always gets an answer. People do things, say things, wear things, win honors, go places. Things happen to people...funny things, weird things, odd things. "Had you heard...?" can start you off. Places are easy to talk about too. Places you've been...places you're going...places you'd rather be than where you are right now. When you've exhausted the tangibles, start on ideas. "What do you think about...?" will set him chatting. You'll even find yourself being talked down if you come out flatly with "I think...!" Talk about things you've never done...people you've never met...places you've never seen...things you know nothing about. It's a sure way to pry information out of a stranger.

Conversation's a game of associated ideas. One thing leads to another. And like most games, it requires at least two players. It's not a monologue. Toss words out...then wait for responses. It takes two active ears...as well as a nimble tongue!

Baseball Team Scores Big Win; Penn Victorious in Lacrosse

A brilliant victory for the baseball team headlined the sports events for the week, when Bryn Mawr defeated the University of Pennsylvania 11-2 last Thursday on Museum Field. Bryn Mawr collected five runs in the first inning, staving off the Penn offense until the fifth, when the home team made their two runs.

The Owls played "better than any Bryn Mawr team I have ever seen," Miss Yeager stated after the game. Peggy Shiney's pitching was outstanding, and the catcher and basemen coordinated amazingly well, with good double plays and general alertness, to prevent Penn's seven hits from tallying as runs.

Bryn Mawr made seventeen hits, with only two errors, in contrast with Penn's seven hits and four errors. Peggy Shiney and Bobbie Young led the batting averages with four hits, and Bobbie's three-bagger brought in two other runners.

The newly-formed second team's debut will occur this Tuesday against Shipley, at Bryn Mawr. The general enthusiasm for baseball this year, and the success of the varsity have created a keen interest in a second team.

The week's defeat also evolved from a meeting with Penn. On Monday an experienced Penn lacrosse team avenged the baseball defeat by an 8-2 victory over Bryn Mawr. In this second game, Bryn Mawr's newcomers to lacrosse showed promising ability, although the outcome of the game was never in doubt. The improvement and enthusiasm in the lacrosse players augurs well for the future of the game at the college.

Libby Grey, '50, who played lacrosse in England before coming to Bryn Mawr, made both of the Owls' points, breaking through the strong Penn defense.

This week's sports schedule includes the following events:
May 4, Sunday Gym open 2-6; Pool open 4-6.

May 5, Monday 4:00 Lacrosse vs. Shipley, here.

4:15 Baseball vs. Ursinus, there.

May 6, Tuesday 3:00 Tennis vs. Swarthmore, here.

4:00 2nd Team baseball vs. Shipley.

College Chorus Sells Recordings

Orders are now being taken for the two records recently made by the College Chorus. The records will arrive on May 9 and will be sold at the auction on that day and at the Faculty Show on May 10.

One of the Chorus recordings features "Concao" on one side and "Sacerdotes Domini" on the other. The second has "Hi Ho the Preacher Man" and "Blooming on the Hilltop" on one side and "Watercresses" on the reverse. The two Appalachian folk songs were written especially for the Chorus and all were featured on the recent Chorus radio broadcast with the exception of "Sacerdotes Domini."

The price of the records will be $1.25 apiece, or $2.50 for the pair. All profits from their sale will go to the Drive.
