Warburg, Cooper Lead In Chekhov's Drama Of Love, Conflict

On March 19 and 20, the Bryn Mawr Varsity Players and Haverford Cap and Bells will present Anton Chekhov's The Sea Gull under the direction of Frederick Thon. The play deals with the combination and conflict of different kinds of love—with the action following from this conflict. It stresses character rather than plot. Gerry Warburg and Brooks Cooper have the leading roles, and the cast is as follows:

Irina Arcadina, Madame Trepieff, an actress, Gerry Warburg. Constantine Trepieff, her son, Alan Levensohn.

Peter Sorin, her brother, Henry Levensohn.

Nina Zaryechny, a young girl, Nancy Kunhardt.

Ilya Shamreyeff, a retired lieutenant, John Gail.

Pauline Andreyevna, his wife, Ann J. Rock.

Masha (Marya Ilinishna), his daughter, Marjorie Low.

Boris Trigorin, a literary man, Brooks Cooper.

Eugene Dorn, a doctor, Don Schofstell.

Princeton Joins B M In Concert

Friday night's Princeton concert will feature the two choruses combining in Brahms' Schicksallied ("Song of Fate"). The audience will also hear for the first time at Bryn Mawr its own Mr. Goodale's High Flight, with words by the RAF pilot John Magee, Jr., who was killed in action at the age of nineteen.

Also new at Bryn Mawr are four choral hymns by the modern Englishman, Gustav Holst. The hymns, from the Hindu Rig Veda, include Hymns to Vena, to the Dawn, to Varuna, and to Agni.

Princeton will sing several classical songs, and, after intermission, a group of folk songs.

History, Knitting, Cleaning Mark Knaplund, New Undergrad Pres.

by Betty-Bright Page, '49

With a gentle, unbelieving sniff at her gardenia, Karen Knaplund plunged into thoughts of Undergrad and plans for next year. She didn't even drop a stitch on that crimson and white Harvard sweater so well-known in Undergrad Council. "After all, I am a history major and I don't believe in knitting in classes," she explained very logically.

Completing a cycle begun Freshman year when her S. A., Pat Behrens, was Undergrad president, Karen announced that her immediate plans include special May Day Hop tutoring for Henny, and the completion of the aforementioned sweater sleeve. She is also volleying a basketball for the Junior Class in her spare time.

Ferrer Lecture Topic Announced: Modern Theatre

On Thursday, March 18th, Jose Ferrer will lecture in Goodhart, at 8 o'clock, on Phases of Contemporary Theatre. His lecture will be based upon student questions, which should be sent to Henny Burch, Merion, before the 18th.

Mr. Ferrer, who went to Princeton, has been in the theatre since 1935, when he appeared with Joshua Logan's Stock Company at Suffern, New York. He has played in A Slight Case of Murder, Anthony and Cleopatra, Brother Rat, Mamba's Daughters, Key Largo, Charley's Aunt, and he succeeded Danny Kaye as Jerry Walker in Let's Face It. In 1943 he played Iago in Othello, with Paul Robeson and toured with it during 1944-45. He next staged and played in Strange Fruit, toured in The Play's The Thing and Cyrano.

Recently he has been at the City Centre and has put on Volpone and some Russian one-act plays.

Wilder Discusses Christian Faith, Biblical Symbols

Common Room, March 8.

In explaining "Faith and its Language in the New Testament," Professor Amos N. Wilder, professor of the New Testament at Chicago Theological Seminary, asserted "Faith makes its own picture of the world and has to find a language to describe this picture." In this, faith is analogous to poetry which also has to use its own symbols of expression.

Professor Wilder explained that the problem of faith or loss of ritual in modern life is due to discouragement and to a half-faith which is irresponsible and misleading. Faith is undergoing a crisis because "there is no emphatic emphasis of potent faith in our life today," he continued. Therefore, we feel that we are not behaving like ourselves and want some sign of the magnanimity of faith. "In order to achieve a political faith, the ambiguity in the Christian faith,

Toynbee Returns; Talks on Change In English Life

"A silent and bloodless social revolution of a far-reaching kind has occurred in England with a minimum degree of fear and hate," declared Professor Arnold Toynbee, speaking in chapel on March 7, in Goodhart auditorium. His subject was "Recent Social Changes in England and Their Religious Significance." In the last generation there was a great cleavage between the middle and working classes in England, Dr. Toynbee said. A number of the middle class was occupied in the Indian Civil Service, where their world was secure and their old age provided for. The working class, however, had no such security to look forward to, and it was extremely difficult for them to rise out of their class.

A big social revolution occurred just before 1914, Dr. Toynbee asserted, and the situations, or rather the expectations, of the two classes have now been reversed. Opportunities have shrunk for the middle class. With the gradual steps towards the freedom of India that field has been closed to them. At the same time, the competition for available openings has greatly increased, due to the revolution in education available to the lower Dress will be formal and a seven-piece orchestra, of which one of the former porters is a member, promises lively music of all varieties. The decorations committee, headed by Coretha Creasy, Denbigh, has as yet disclosed no clues, but preparations continue and festivity is the expected keynote for the evening of the 19th. Louis White, also of Denbigh, heads the floor committee.

The dance is given by the undergraduates for the employees. The maids and porters want as many students as possible to join them in the gym on March 19 and help make it a huge and gala party. Admission for students will be $.25.

McBride Presents Joint Award For Interrelated Achievements

Qualities of Leadership, Advancement of Women Basis for Award

The M. Carey Thomas Award is presented from time to time at the discretion of a Committee approved by the Alumnae Association to an American woman in recognition of eminent achievement. The award carries with it the gift of $5,000, which tonight is divided between the two recipients. Mrs. Roosevelt has announced that her share will be allotted to the Wiltwyck School at Esopus, New York, for delinquent boys between the ages of seven and twelve. Mrs. Roosevelt leaves for London at the end of March for the unveiling of a statue of Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

This year's Committee in charge of the Award, of which Miss McBride is chairman, includes Mrs. Stephen V. Benet, Mrs. Everett N. Case, Dr. Margaret D. Craighill, Mrs. George Gellhorn, Mrs. Wallace Notestein and Mrs. Samuel H. Paul.

Founded as Tribute

As a tribute to M. Carey Thomas, president of Bryn Mawr College 1894-1922, the award was founded by a group of alumnae in 1922. They turned over to the College the sum of $25,000, the accumulated interest to be used from time to time. An additional sum of $5,000 was contributed so that the first Award could be made to President Thomas upon her retirement.

When Miss Park presented Miss Thomas with the first Award, she set the requirements for the recipient. The award "should be given to an American woman of eminence who, whatever her profession or her interests or her attainment might be, artist, statesman, writer, scientist, should possess two qualities which Miss Thomas herself had preeminently.

"First, she should have the courage, imagination, wisdom, clear sight of the leader, and second, she should carry in her heart the wel-

Seideman Assumes Dual Role: Orienting, Cleaning, Frosh, Shoes

by Helen Martin, '49

Assuming two new jobs simultaneously does not seem to faze Ann Seideman, whose first reaction on being interviewed after her election as president of Self-Gov., was a hope "that it will work out as well this year as it did last year." Ann, who has also become co-head of the Merion Cleaning Agency, says that at any rate her feet are large enough to fit into the double job!

At present, she sees no need of change in the organization. The very small number of cases that had to be considered this year, she points out, proves how well the system is working, and also proves that the students are assuming in-

International Attainment Humanitarianism Recognized

Goodhart, March 11, 8:30 P. M.

It was announced tonight that the joint recipients of the M. Carey Thomas Award for 1948 were Eleanor Roosevelt and Anna Lord Strauss. Miss Katherine Elizabeth McBride, president of the college, made the presentation. After responses by Mrs. Roosevelt and Miss Strauss, the Honorable Wiley Blount Rutledge gave the address.

"The outstanding achievement at this time among the women of this country," said Miss McBride, "is in the critical field of international relations. There women are contributing leadership to a degree and in a fashion unknown when the M. Carey Thomas award was founded. There they are evolving an understanding of world problems which is a major factor in the action of this government and in the climate of public opinion."

Not Split Decision

The award has been made jointly for the first time not because of a split decision in any sense, but in an effort to emphasize the inter-related achievements of these women. On this subject Miss McBride spoke as follows:

"The members of this audience will be instantly aware that either of these women might have won such an award as this separately and on several counts.

"Mrs. Roosevelt has served this country for many years and in many capacities, long before the United Nations was formed or the Commission on Human Rights turned over to her chairmanship. Were I to choose the basis for an award to Mrs. Roosevelt singly I should make it to her as a great humanitarian. She is preeminent in her belief in man and his ability to improve his own conditions and his relationships with his fellows, preeminent also in her day to day effort in support of those working for the betterment of man.

"Miss Strauss, too, is a public servant, convinced of the values of democratic society and devoting her life to their reinforcement. It would be easy to make such an award to her as public servant, and dividual responsibility.

"Comparison with the governmental systems of other colleges shows that Bryn Mawr has an almost unique one, laying the entire responsibility on the student body," proudly says Ann, who has done considerable work for the new NSA student government clinic recently established on campus.

"The big job that always faces Self-Gov., as well as the entire student body, is the orienting of the freshman class next year into our system," she adds. "Most of the entering students have lived under fairly heavily regulated systems in the schools from which they come; at Bryn Mawr, they have to learn to assume the responsibility of their own government."

The M. Carey Thomas Award

We at Bryn Mawr are proud to have a part in tonight's M. Carey Thomas award. We are proud that such an award exists, to be given in the name of Bryn Mawr's past great president; and we are sorry that the whole student body cannot attend the presentation to see our own great president make the award.

Bryn Mawr gives no honorary degree; this is its highest honor. Originally founded by a group of alumnae as a tribute to Miss Thomas herself, the award was then designated as an honor to be given to any American woman, in recognition of eminent achievement. The list of recipients is a stirring roll-call: M. Carey Thomas, 1922; Jane Addams, 1931; Florence Sabin, 1935; Marion Edwards Park, 1943; and now Eleanor Roosevelt and Anna Lord Strauss.

They advanced the cause of women, the welfare of people everywhere. They bettered health, social conditions, education, national and international affairs.

When the prize was awarded to Miss Thomas, Miss Park postulated the two qualities requisite for the honor: "First, she should have the courage, imagination, wisdom, clear sight of the leader, and second, she should carry in her heart the welfare of women."

To Mrs. Roosevelt and Miss Strauss, we offer congratulations. We know that you possess these qualities in full measure, and so we welcome you into a brave fellowship.

ERP or Chaos?

It is now scarcely nine months since the U. S. first proposed the Marshall Plan for European Recovery. Intended to support and aid the countries of Western Europe until they could rehabilitate themselves, the Marshall Plan also offers a substantial threat to Communism in general and to Russia in particular by attempting to remove the discontent which so often fosters and encourages Communism. As was to be expected, Russia opposed and boycotted the Marshall Plan in every conceivable way: by formulating the Molotov Plan for Eastern Europe in July, by establishing the nine-nation Comintern to combat ERP, in October, and by launching large-scale industrial and civil strikes in France and Italy in order to create chaos and prevent the peaceful and rational solution of their own problem by these countries. Her last step has been to stage a coup d'etat in Czechoslovakia and simultaneously to move into Finland.

It is clear that this tense situation of East vs. West cannot last indefinitely without a showdown of some sort. Russia now controls all the Balkans except Greece, but (except for her zone in Germany) has as yet no official hold on the countries of Western Europe. However, the real test is still to come. If the April elections in Italy should put the Com-

Current Events

Speaking on Spain Monday night in the Common Room, Miss Nepper stated that eighty-five per cent of Spain is dissatisfied with Franco's government and would gladly overthrow it. However, they fear another civil war and want a bloodless change of government.

The core of Spanish resistance can be divided into two main groups, she continued. First of all, there are the Monarchists who have sub-divided into the "tough school" and will have nothing to do with Franco and into another group who would be willing to compromise if they thought that Franco would bring peace to Spain. The other main group of national Spanish resistance are the Leftist parties. There are five of them, the Communist party being the most important. There are also two trade union groups: the anarchist CNT and the socialist UGT.

These five groups joined in a single bloc when the Communists joined in 1936. They now run a paper and have a political platform which asks for a parliamentary form of government, a review of the judicial system, civil right and education in the hands of the State and not the church.

The Spanish government in exile still exists, but because of a severe split, its ranks are weak. It was hopeful of action when its members were asked to the San Francisco Conference in 1945 and with the inauguration of Britain's Socialist government that same summer. Spanish resistance circles in and out of Spain both feel that the U N and Britain have let them down.

to cite her contribution in many agencies in New York State and in the country at large.

International Achievement

"It is the achievement of these two women in the international field, however, which this particular award signalizes. As a member of the United States delegation to the First Session of the General Assembly and later as Chairman of the Human Rights Commission, Mrs. Roosevelt has become one of the great representatives of the United States . . . It has been Miss Strauss' privilege to contribute to the development of policy but particularly to increase understanding across the country through the League of Women Voters. President of the National League of Women Voters since 1944, Miss Strauss has taken the leadership at a time when international problems were of the utmost significance. She has made a great contribution in bringing to women the kind of knowledge which is both the spur to intelligent action and the basis for it."

munists into power, then the real invasion of East into West will have begun.

It is a disgrace that our administrative officers are more interested in party politics, with the 1948 elections in view, than they are in taking the steps to save Europe (and incidentally to save ourselves) from chaos. The speedy passing and putting into effect of the Marshall Plan is now our last hope for a peaceful world, and all Europe is looking to us for help.

Opinion

B. M. Graduate's Letter Questions Criticism Of Play Review

To the editor:

While I am in no position to judge the merits of Miss Low's play, there are two points in her recent letter with which I should like to take issue. Before doing so, however, I wish to state that I completely agree with her in that the original review was of no constructive help to the author.

Miss Low tells us that "playwrights have always written for audiences, to entertain them, not to lecture or preach to them." I cannot agree. On the contrary, the better playwrights have always produced something besides sheer entertainment. Sophocles, Aristophanes and Plautus did not merely entertain. Will anyone claim that Shakespeare never preaches or lectures? Are Bernard Shaw, Maxwell Anderson, Eugene O'Neill dramatists who have provided nothing but frothy entertainment?

Emily Townsend (alternate)
Last year Emily was Secretary of the Freshman class and Freshman hall representative. She is a member of the Varsity Players, Makeup Editor of the College NEWS, a member of Stage Guild, and for two years has been on the varsity basketball team.

I think not. It is rather the measure of their worth that they have held their audiences while in the act of lecturing to them.

Responsibility of Playwright

If Miss Low is going to write for the "people," and I would be interested in knowing the identity of this generality, then should she not feel some obligation to them in her writing? She cannot be satisfied with giving them entertainment alone without including, subtly, food for thought. The drama is one of the most omnipotent of arts as it reaches such a large number of people, and as such it has a heavy responsibility. As one who has so frequently expressed a deep interest in the state of the world, Miss Low must realize that the dramatists' power of communication can do much towards improving conditions. It is, therefore, his duty to use this power to effect the greatest amount of good. It is improbable that writing without any important theme or moral will achieve this goal.

I find it difficult to believe that, in the short space of time that has elapsed since last June, Bryn Mawr has undergone such radical changes. Miss Low would have us think that Bryn Mawr audiences are "neither intellectual nor emotional." Then she tells us that "these people admitted that the play held their emotional and intellectual interest." It would seem that Miss Low has drawn comfort from a vacuum!

The assertion that Bryn Mawr audiences are "a large part snobs, prudes and prejudiced pretenders" is an interesting, albeit unfortunate, bit of alliteration. I think there are many of us who would protest that if she has learned no more from "living with sharecroppers" than she has from living with Bryn Mawr, her intimate knowledge of the former is questionable.

Sincerely,

Elizabeth M. Dowling, '47.

A. Toynbee Returns To Speak in Chapel

class. There has been a change in the whole tone of life as well as in political and social reforms, Dr. Toynbee said. The people are more cultivated and more humane now.

The nation as a whole has lost a political empire, and, still more important, an economic one as well. At the same time she has gained a more acute sense of social justice, while a high degree of acquiescence has accompanied all changes. "There has been no break in the constitutional life and history of the country," Dr. Toynbee declared. This is a safeguard against explosions of violence. The lower class has never been so embittered as to refute the constitution, and they have taken on parliamentary tradition completely, gaining their power by constitutional means.

The conscience of the middle class, who have yielded so much, has a religious basis and origin, Professor Toynbee declared. Being idealistic, the religious element has been the main thing which has kept the revolution from being non-violent. "When politics cease to be inspired by religion, they soon go astray," according to Dr. Toynbee, but religious methods and principles should not be applied to the execution of politics. Men's relations to one another are constantly in a state of flux, whereas their relations to God are more stable, and therefore the same methods cannot be applied to both. The present world is such that people of different backgrounds are

Jobs Discussed At Language Tea

At the Vocational Committee tea for faculty and students of the Modern Language department, faculty and alumnae speakers agreed that teaching seemed the best possible profession for students in this field. Other opportunities in government work and in the business world were also cited, but teaching was unanimously advocated as most advantageous.

Miss Frances de Graaff, assistant professor of Russian at Bryn Mawr, described the opportunities in the teaching profession, emphasizing that the long vacations as well as the chance to be with young people at an especially important point in their lives allows teachers to "learn by doing." This, she added, more than compensates for the usual drawbacks attributed to teaching.

Explains Gov't Positions

In explaining the government positions open to modern language majors, Mrs. Katherine Richard Hill, '39, formerly with the State department in Washington and Germany, stated that other skills, especially a knowledge of economics or history, was more important than the knowledge of a language. "Your language is merely a tool which you can use in translating and interpreting, but it is more a prerequisite than a qualification." Like Miss de Graaff, Mrs. Hill suggested teaching as a profession in which real satisfaction can be derived from working. The government work is glamorous, but there is no feeling of having accomplished anything.

Miss Dorothy Nepper, Dean of the College, summed up what had already been said and suggested a remedy for "the ghost character that haunts the American scene." Her remedy is going to conventions of various women's organizations where the student will find that there are "odd" women in all professions. She added some information about positions now held by former language majors, and advocated a course in how to get a job.

Incidentally

Not everyone is as history-haunted as the young ladies of Bryn Mawr, we discovered Sunday night, when the telephone rang in the NEWS room, and a voice asked "Is there going to be a talk in Goodhart tonight?" When we replied that Mr. Toynbee was going to speak, and the voice said, "Who is he?" we were so non-plussed that we could only stammer that, well, he was supposed to be the foremost historian in the world!

* * *

Evidently the Freshman Show has begun a battle royal with Haverford, or at least it would seem so in view of the conversation overheard in Art Lab, when one lad couldn't understand the reason for a girl knitting a white baby sweater. The girl remarked cleverly—she thought—that there were girl, boy and neuter babies; but regretted her remark when the Haverfordian immediately responded, with accents of disgust, "Oh, that's the kind they send to Bryn Mawr!"

* * *

* * *

The rational is not always triumphant, we found the other day in the Inn. We reproduce verbatim the conversation we overheard: "We called off the Horaces and at seventy-six of them showed up in Rhoads Showcase looking for Maisie."

* * *

And speaking of the "Vanishing Lady", as aren't we all after the mass frustration program sponsored by Undergrad Friday night in the Music Room, won't someone take the Thirty-Nine Steps, or however many are necessary to bring her back alive?

* * *

We hope that no Reynolds' representatives are browsing around the campus these days; we can think of nothing more depressing than seeing 500 of their cigarette cases, each with a neatly-embossed CAMELS upon it, enclosing 500 packs of Chesterfields!

Pollock To Speak On Don Sturzo

Dr. Robert C. Pollock, associate professor in the graduate school of Arts and Sciences at Fordham University will lecture on "Christian and Modern Humanism in the Philosophy of Don Sturzo" in the Common Room at 830 on March 16.

Sturzo is the great political philosopher and sociologist of modern Italy, the founder and spiritual leader of the Christian Democratic Party. After founding the Confederation of Christian Democratic Unions and the Popular Party of which he was the head, he continued his work in other countries, writing prolifically while exiled from fascist Italy. Returning after Mussolini's downfall, he returned to his work with the Popular Party, which emerged as the Christian Democratic Party.

Dr. Pollock has been for some years a student of the philosophical aspects of Don Sturzo's social theories and recently lectured on the Italian philosopher and sociologist at the New School in New York. These lectures, together with other essays on Don Sturzo's thought, are being published as "Man in Society and Thought."

"The surrealist film we showed last term, written by Dali was probably the most popular film we showed last term. The 'avant garde' films that we have for this term are very much out of the ordinary also, and are not listed in any of the catalogues. I only raised them by going down to The Museum of Modern Art."

brought close together and must live as one unit. But the people must realize that what is good for one country is not necessarily right for all.

The internal revolution which has occurred in England is part of an external revolution in the world. The countries on the scale of Great Britain and France can only live as parts of a bigger whole. They must crystallize around one of the two bigger units, rather than stick together. If Great Britain can contribute mutual tolerance and a sense of social justice as right in itself, Professor Toynbee declared, she will have done her part in the world.

Advice:

Summer experience is a help in getting a job after graduation. If you can get something which bears directly on what you plan to do later, so much the better; if not, get what experience you can. We find that the first question almost all employers ask is: "Has this student ever had any jobs?" Volunteer work in your communities is as valuable as a paid job.

A business course is also something to think about for the summer. Most of the beginning jobs in publishing, radio, advertising, museums, etc., are secretarial. Even the United Nations occasionally needs Americans as secretaries. For those of you who want to work abroad, a business course is invaluable. Do not believe the old saying, "Once a secretary, always a secretary." Look on the secretarial job as an entering wedge. Once you are inside the door, what happens afterwards is more or less up to you.

Quartet To Play In Wayne Sunday

The Tri-County Concerts Association will offer one of the outstanding musical events of its current season next Sunday evening, March 14, when it brings the renowned Curtis String Quartet, assisted by William Berman, viola, and Meta Taber, cello, to Radnor High School, Wayne, in a program of chamber music.

The concert is scheduled for 8:30 P. M. and the public is invited. There is no admission charge. Those who wish to contribute toward this and further concerts will find collection boxes at the doors.

The program will include Haydn's famous "Lark" Quartet, Mozart's Quintet in G minor, K. 516, and the Brahms Sextet in B flat major, Opus 18.

The Curtis Quartet, which is made up of Jascha Brodsky, violin, Louis Berman, violin, Max Aronoff, viola, and Orlando Cole, cello, is rapidly becoming one of the top quartets in the country and another source of Philadelphia's claim to musical fame.

Since 1927, the group has crossed two continents and played more than a thousand concerts. Recently, it realized an ambition by establishing its own New School of Music in Philadelphia.

Language of Faith Explained by Wilder

According to Professor Wilder, there are three reasons why the faith of the New Testament is difficult; because of its sheer greatness, because it is considered otherworldly, and because it is couched in old world symbols of a pre-scientific age. Since the faith of the New Testament is a "Good News—so extraordinary that it leads to elation and triumph," it must find a suitable medium of expression in the symbolism of the age when it appeared.

Enigma of New Testament

To understand the faith in the New Testament we must therefore put ourselves in the place of someone undergoing a gigantic, powerful faith. Citing Jesus' Message of the Future, Professor Wilder showed that the attempt to come to terms with the language in which this tremendous faith is expressed is of three kinds—the literal or prosaic way, which leads to a complete misunderstanding or loss of the message; the interpretation that the kingdom of God asserts itself little by little in this world, which is also false, and the recognition that Jesus is using his own symbols without distinguishing between this and the other world.

Professor Wilder claimed that the great error of today is to think in terms of a finite rather than an infinite God, thereby destroying security and losing the full triumph of faith.

Bentley's Letters From Paris Feature Les Invalides, Cafes

The following excerpts from letters, written by Barbara Bentley, '49, who is now spending her junior year at the Sorbonne, give a vivid and lively picture of Paris in the fall of 1947:

"The next morning it was such fun seeing where we were. We had a breakfast of one little piece of bread with jam, powdered orange juice and lousy coffee. But the sun poured in a lovely dark oak-paneled dining room and the garden is magnificent—all enclosed and green. I'm sitting in it now in the sun writing. Around me there is a young lady singing scales in a neighboring pension, and two men arguing vehemently outside. On one side of the garden wall is a house of about five stories with no windows on this side—just very thick ivy which is swarming with birds. Reid Hall itself was built in the early 18th century . . .

soir—'Goupi les main rouges'—wonderful picture of peasant life in Bretagne. Coming next is Ray Milland in 'Le Poison,' known to us as 'Lost Weekend' ! !

"Paris is just as it should be—lively as ever, few cars, but those few out after every pedestrian. Open cafes, gendarmes, and, yes, even cats! And over it all a strong

"... We... walked all the way to Les Invalides and saw the emperor and all the tombs and relics... Then we went behind into that gigantic court. There were several big expositions going on—all about the French struggle to keep the Rhine... It (one of the expositions) showed different costumes of battle since early Gaulois times right down to the present. And all sorts of maps and relics, from old coins down to airplanes suspended from the ceiling.
"... From there we walked to the Seine and stood for hours watching fishermen, tug boats, barges and birds. Puis we went between le Grand Palais et le Petit Palais. There will be a 'Concours Hippique—Avec le Jumping' there in a few days. I'm dying to go. Then we walked along the Champs-Elysee for a while and saw a different Paris completely—three times as ritzy and expensive... I like our part better; it has much more character. I bought some marons rotis and have decided to live off them all winter.

Spread it Thinner

by Elizabeth Woodward

America's foremost authority on young people's problems

Of the people you know, how many will you still be seeing ten years from now? Only the ones you know really well, you say. The kids you've grown up with. The new friends you've made best friends. All the others will fall by the wayside... out of sight and out of memory. You haven't time to keep them for posterity.

For with you... to be friends is to go all out. Being constantly together, sharing secrets, accumulating memories, plowing into new experiences shoulder to shoulder, dishing out big doses of devotion, possessing each other. There's no halfway measure. Being that close takes so much steam... you can be friends with only a few. There just isn't any more of you to go around.

You've probably settled down cozily to going steady with one boy. You have a man for all the big and little moments when you need one. You don't need other men, you think. Besides, there aren't any free dating hours.

In between dates, you run around with one special girl. She's your port in all storms, your constant abettor, your other half. These best friends require a lot of attention. They don't thrive on separation, indifference or casual treatment.

So you sit back in your snug harbor and date only one boy... and meet no others. You trot with the same group of girls... and never raise your sights. While the rest of your acquaintances stay casual... just because you haven't time to draw them close.

You know... a girl is known by the company she keeps. Her friends are an indication of her taste and personality... just as are the clothes she wears, the things she reads, and the perfume she puts behind her ears.

A girl can always get by with just one good dress. But just wear it every day in the week and high days too... and it gets to be like a very old shoe. A wardrobe that offers changes to fit her moods is more colorful and more fun.

Pals of the bosom are a comfort and joy. But you can still be that all-out friend with people you don't see all the time. You can share life and laughs with friends you don't clutch close. You can pile up backlogs of memories with cronies you don't possess. You can keep lots of friendships thriving if you'll spread yourself thinner... and circulate.

Why not bedeck your future with a variety of good friends? Instead of letting them slip through your fingers... because you haven't time to keep them?
