She was found on an embankment near the St. David's station of the Pennsylvania main line. She was found to have a skull fracture and was pronounced dead upon the arrival of a physician.

Mrs. Devereux was a native of Minneapolis. She had lived most of her life in the Philadelphia area and was a graduate of Children's Hospital. She had been head nurse in the men's infirmary since 1932.

Fund Raising, 1951 - 52

Development Program moves ahead in 2nd year; Alumni Fund falters; John Clement '08 stays as Development head; "Ike" Darlington '07 resigns as Fund chairman; Richard Smith '41 takes over

John S. Clement '08, Chairman, Development Program

IN its second year of existence the Swarthmore College Development Program continued in 1951-52 its steady forward pace setting new records for funds received. The total amount for all fund raising activities was $307,425.54, an increase of more than $78,000 over last year.

The Development Program includes money from various sources, restricted and unrestricted gifts, donations to the Alumni Fund, the non-alumni Parents' Fund and other Friends of Swarthmore, and money from research grants.

A decisive factor in helping to swell this year's fund were the 243 alumni gifts for special purposes. The total here was $118,380.06, more than triple the amount received last year for special use.

The Alumni Fund completed another year of fund raising on June 30. By that date 3306 alumni contributed $81,174.18. While it is to be regretted that it did not reach the $90,000 goal the year 1951-52 was still one of the best ever experienced. This is evidenced not only by the overall success of the Development Program but in the continued increase in participation among the alumni body.

The '51-'52 Fund had more donors and a higher per cent of participation than any other drive in Swarthmore's history. The 3306 donors were 321 more than last year, and comprised 39% of all living Swarthmoreans. The 321 donors included 126 members of the class of 1951 and 195 alumni who had never given before. This is evidence of a steadily growing interest among the alumni.

For the third successive year the class of 1949, Chalmers Stroup, class agent, led all other classes in the total number of donors with 161, ten more than last year. '49 has led in this division every year since it graduated although its immediate junior, '50, led by James Reilly, is giving it increasing competition. These two classes were also 1-2 in this department last year.

The Senior Alumni which includes all classes between '78 and '94, Dora Gilbert '93, class agent, subscribed the greatest amount, $6,200. The class of 1914, Edwin Murch, agent, was second with $4,839.

Celebrating its 45th reunion, the class of 1907, Mary Verlenden, class agent, responded to the Fund with 85% of its members contributing $3,474.73 to make it first in the per cent of participation and third in amount subscribed.

Second in per cent of participation was the class of 1912, the 40th reunion class, with 80% participation. Co-agents in this class were Laurence P. Sharples and Amy Baker Ferguson. 1906, last year's winner in this department, slipped to third position.

The class with the greatest increase in per cent of participation was 1899, Gilbert Hall, class agent, which doubled its number of donors, jumping from 28% to 57% of the class participating. This, despite the fact that Gilbert Hall was ill and spent the last two months of the drive in the hospital.

Another point of interest is the consistently high per cent of participation by the classes in the decade of the '40's. Six of these classes have a per cent of participation of more than 40%. These are among the first eight of all graduating classes. First, as mentioned, is '49, in third place is '43, in fifth place is '48, sixth, seventh and eighth places belong to '40, '47 and '41. The average for ten classes is appropriately enough, 40%, slightly above the overall average for total participation.

Not to be forgotten is the non-alumni Parents' Fund to which 173 parents donated $14,127. This is more than $4,000 more than last year although the total number of parents is only seven more than last year.

In addition there were 95 Other Friends of Swarthmore who gave $23,382.68 to the Development Program. Five research grants totalled $70,361.62.

The Committee on Bequests headed by Claude C. Smith '14 has continued its efforts to familiarize alumni and friends of the needs of the college. A brochure entitled The Price of Conviction was prepared telling of the long range needs of the college and ways in which money can be given for these and other purposes. More than 9,000 copies were distributed to alumni attorneys, trust officers and bank presidents throughout the country.

During the past year an increasing number of bequests or trusts were received indicating a growing interest in providing for the college. Provisions have been made for outright gifts, general endowment, scholarships, etc.

The Public Relations Committee under the chairmanship of Boyd T. Barnard '17, composed of Board, alumni and faculty members, planned a program which includes alumni, students, faculty, parents, community, Society of Friends, industries, schools, and foundations.

Retiring chairman Isaac Darlington '07 (right) discusses Alumni Fund plans with Richard Smith '41, new chairman.

Isaac G. "Ike" Darlington '07 has resigned as chairman of the Alumni Fund Committee after four successful years in that post. His place will be taken by Richard O. Smith '41.

Under "Ike's" leadership the Alumni Fund has shown a steady and persistent growth. The number of donors has grown from 2528 in 1948 to this year's 3306. In his first three years the total jumped from a little more than $70,000 to more than $90,000. "Ike's" enthusiasm and faithfulness in his work is in great part responsible for that encouraging growth.

Swarthmore College owes a large debt of gratitude to the work of this loyal son.

Richard O. Smith brings to his new job many of the same qualities that made the outgoing chairman such a success in the job. A loyal and enthusiastic worker, "Dick" has been a member of the Alumni Fund Committee since 1948. He is currently serving as president of his class.

An investment broker for Stroud & Co., Philadelphia, Dick comes from a family of Swarthmoreans. His father is Claude C. Smith '14, recently elected chairman of the Board of Managers. He is married to June Corey Smith '43 and has three children. His sisters, Gene Smith McCulloch '42 and Nancy Smith Hayden '46, and brother, Carter T. Smith '51, are all graduates of the college.

Letter from the President

and another in public speaking.

It is not easy to draw a clear line between liberal and practical subjects. We can see that typing and stenography would be contrary to the spirit of the college. To a less extent the same would be true of salesmanship and marketing, but there is also the practical argument that the Wharton School does this sort of thing much better than Swarthmore can hope to. Education courses, on the other hand, are on the increase in response to the nation-wide need for teachers and in an effort to make a contribution to that need. In the liberal arts there are the three traditional areas of the humanities, the social sciences, and the natural sciences. Unlike most liberal arts colleges Swarthmore also includes engineering. The present curriculum was carefully planned to include the major areas of human experience and to blend the theoretical and the practical. How much farther should we go in the practical direction?

There is, however, a second pressure to expand the curriculum. As the world changes, so must the college change. The past two decades have seen a considerable increase in history courses, in the development of psychology, in the study of international relations and in a program of Russian studies. In addition the content of nearly every course has profoundly changed. We still offer no sociology, no anthropology, and no geography. In the field of the humanities both religion and Spanish have been increased in recent years, but Portuguese (the language of half of South America) and Italian are still absent, and Fine Arts and Music are slighted. Geology is a conspicuous omission in the natural sciences. Good reasons can be offered for adding all of them as well as adding new courses in existing departments.

The difficulties are those of time and expense. Students can take only so many courses. The wider the choice, the fewer in each class until instruction becomes hopelessly expensive. Further, every new course or department means either the displacement of some old course or an additional expense. I find myself saying no to developments I would dearly like to see on the grounds that it is better to do a limited number of things well than many poorly. And yet the college cannot and must not stand still. The curriculum is constantly in a state of tension between the retarding force of economy and the advancing need for new subjects.

This is the picture. I hope some of the alumni will write me their thoughts on the subject and that some of the letters can be published in a subsequent issue of THE GARNET. I'd really like to hear from you.

John W. Mason

IN the March issue of the GARNET LETTER I proposed as an experiment in communication a series of letters each of which would be devoted to some aspect of college policy. In this letter I shall discuss the curriculum. That may sound pretty dull, but in reality it is very important and very exciting. What a college teaches is central to its very existence and activity. If you are dissatisfied with the education you obtained at Swarthmore, the chances are that your dissatisfaction focusses on what you were taught. If your children are about to go to college, you are undoubtedly thinking a lot about what they will get at this college or that. What will they get if happily they decide to come to Swarthmore? Will they get what they ought to get?

Swarthmore is a liberal arts college offering courses in the humanities, social sciences, natural sciences, and engineering. There are 18 different departments which offer on the average 170 courses and seminars each semester. I have a strong suspicion that this is too much instruction and that there could be some improvement in quality by a reduction in quantity. But all the pressures are the other way. The argument is almost never over what courses could be profitably omitted, but rather what subjects ought to be added to the curriculum.

One of the pressures is for more practical subjects. In part the demand is for courses which will fit the student to his natural vocation and responsibilities. Women should be taught domestic science. Both men and women should learn more about marriage and how to behave like mature human beings. All students should be required to take courses in the responsibilities of citizenship. The college certainly ought to encourage students along these lines. Is the answer, however, always the introduction of new courses in the curriculum?

The chief factor in the pressure for more practical courses is economic. The college should train its students to earn a living. Typing and stenography should be available for women. So should the many practical courses which compose teacher education and which lead to the certificate without which one cannot teach in the public schools. A little economic theory is fine, but what the men should really have are practical courses in salesmanship, insurance, marketing, transportation, and the like. Paper chemistry is a field all its own and one of growing commercial importance. Add it to the offerings of the chemistry department. Business men constantly complain that their young employees cannot write and cannot speak well in public. Require all students to take a course in business letter writing

Convention Observations

Young alumni delegates, new reactions after their first

by George C. Bond '42
Republican, Calif.

The late Professor Brooks probably had more influence on my life than any other member of the Swarthmore faculty. It was he who interested me in politics as a hobby. Just as other hobbies have their prizes and goals of achievement, so has politics—it is to be a delegate to a National Convention. For the amateur who seeks no public office, but merely plays the game of politics for the satisfaction it gives him, this is a reward worth the work that is required to receive it. As one of the 1206 delegates to the Republican National Convention I represented over 90,000 registered Republicans from my Congressional District in San Diego County, California, and I thoroughly enjoyed the responsibility of this task.

The entire California delegation had been elected on a pledge of support for the candidacy of our Governor Earl Warren. Governor Warren was more than just a favorite son candidate; he was a man whom we knew as a friend, whom we respected as a statesman, and whom we felt was the best qualified candidate for president. Promoting his candidacy gave my trip to Chicago greater meaning, and it made the convention a more emotional personal experience. Since I was not pledged to either of the two major candidates, I was "courted" by the supporters of both. To all who may be delegates to future conventions, I recommend this status. It can best be compared to the experience of being "rushed" by two fraternities at the same time.

Politics today, is personalities more than it is policies. The ability to persuade people is most important. Thus, the most interesting parts of the convention to me, were the other people participating, the candidates, the delegates and the reporters. I met them all.

I was surprised by the warmth and winning manner of Senator Taft. He charmed people who said that he couldn't do it. The reason Taft couldn't win a national election, in my opinion, was not because of his personality, but because of his policies. General Eisenhower's sincerity was most evident, and his direct and unpretentious way of speaking reminded me so much of my own mid-western father, that I couldn't keep the lump out of my throat. Harold Stassen, who was my choice for the nomination four years ago, seemed pathetic in such company. But the greatest personality of all, even in his disappointment, was Earl Warren.

The delegates to this convention should not be described as a group. I was among the half dozen youngest delegates to the convention, but age and sex made little difference in the attitude of any delegate toward a fellow delegate. Our California delegation had come to Chicago by a special train, and we had all developed first name friendships. I had the same single vote as the powerful newspaper publisher and the world famous movie actress. I have never before participated in any activity where there was such an absence of social barriers. The millionaire baker, the Carpenters' Union official, the negro architect, Senator Nixon and I all sat on the same hard folding chairs as part of the same delegation until two o'clock in the morning, and we were all up again for a caucus at eight o'clock the same morning. We all were equally exhausted.

Twice a day I went to the ABC radio booth to participate in a radio broadcast for a San Diego station. This was a report for the people at home on what their representative was doing at the convention. It is probably true that those at home knew as much, or more, about what was happening in Chicago than the delegates did.

The radio, television, and newspaper reporters were among the most interesting friends I made on my convention trip, and the confusion of their activity was reminiscent of my own days in the Swarthmore press box. My conversations with the reporters are the ones that I remember most. Many of them felt that the most encouraging factor of the entire Republican Convention was the number of young people like myself who were taking a part in it. I hope that I have interested some other reader of THE GARNET to join me in my hobby.

Chicago, July 1952

cos, report impressions and nal nominating conventions.

by Kenneth Kurtz '51
Democrat, W. Va.

The first thing to mention about the national party conventions at Chicago is that on the whole the radio listener or television viewer got a better report of what was going on than did the delegates and alternates actually in the convention hall. I spent almost every minute off the convention floor in NBC's radio and TV control room where I was doing some legwork and reporting for the NBC newsroom. The news sources available to the press and radio, the large number of trained people looking for salient facts brought news to the person far from the convention often before the news hit the auditorium floor.

Despite the fact that I was the youngest member of the convention, and only an alternate, I had marvelous opportunities to watch the convention. Through friends in the Stevenson GHQ, I kept in touch with that office, doing some legwork for the Draft Adlai people. I also made it a point to visit every campaign headquarters daily. Since I had a working press pass and radio-TV credentials, I was able to use many of the news outlets available to these media. I also made it a point to try to meet the candidates and was successful in the cases of Russell, who came to our state caucus; Harriman, who gave us a reception; and Kerr, whom I knew beforehand.

I was fortunate enough also to sit in as a proxy member of the National Board of Americans for Democratic Action, which with other liberal and labor groups formed the "liberal" or "Young Turk" caucus at the convention. Though by no means a member of the political hierarchy, I was fortunate enough to see some of the various maneuvers developing and watch some of the action. There was mighty little "bossing" in those parts of the convention I watched. I would venture the opinion that this was truly a most independent convention, which sought out and secured the man the majority of its members honestly and personally wanted.

Some other generalizations can also be made with accuracy about the meeting. First, I was greatly impressed by how much personal relationships between delegates and especially the party leaders govern their actions. My own delegate, an "old pol," and I talked far into the night of the party leaders and the candidates he knew. His own actions were conceived quite often in terms of his personal attachments to these people, and it was quite evident on the floor as in committees that the prior friendship or enmity between party figures had much to do with how they reacted. Yet despite these personal relationships, this convention did, I firmly believe, exercise a greater degree of independence than most previous nominating sessions.

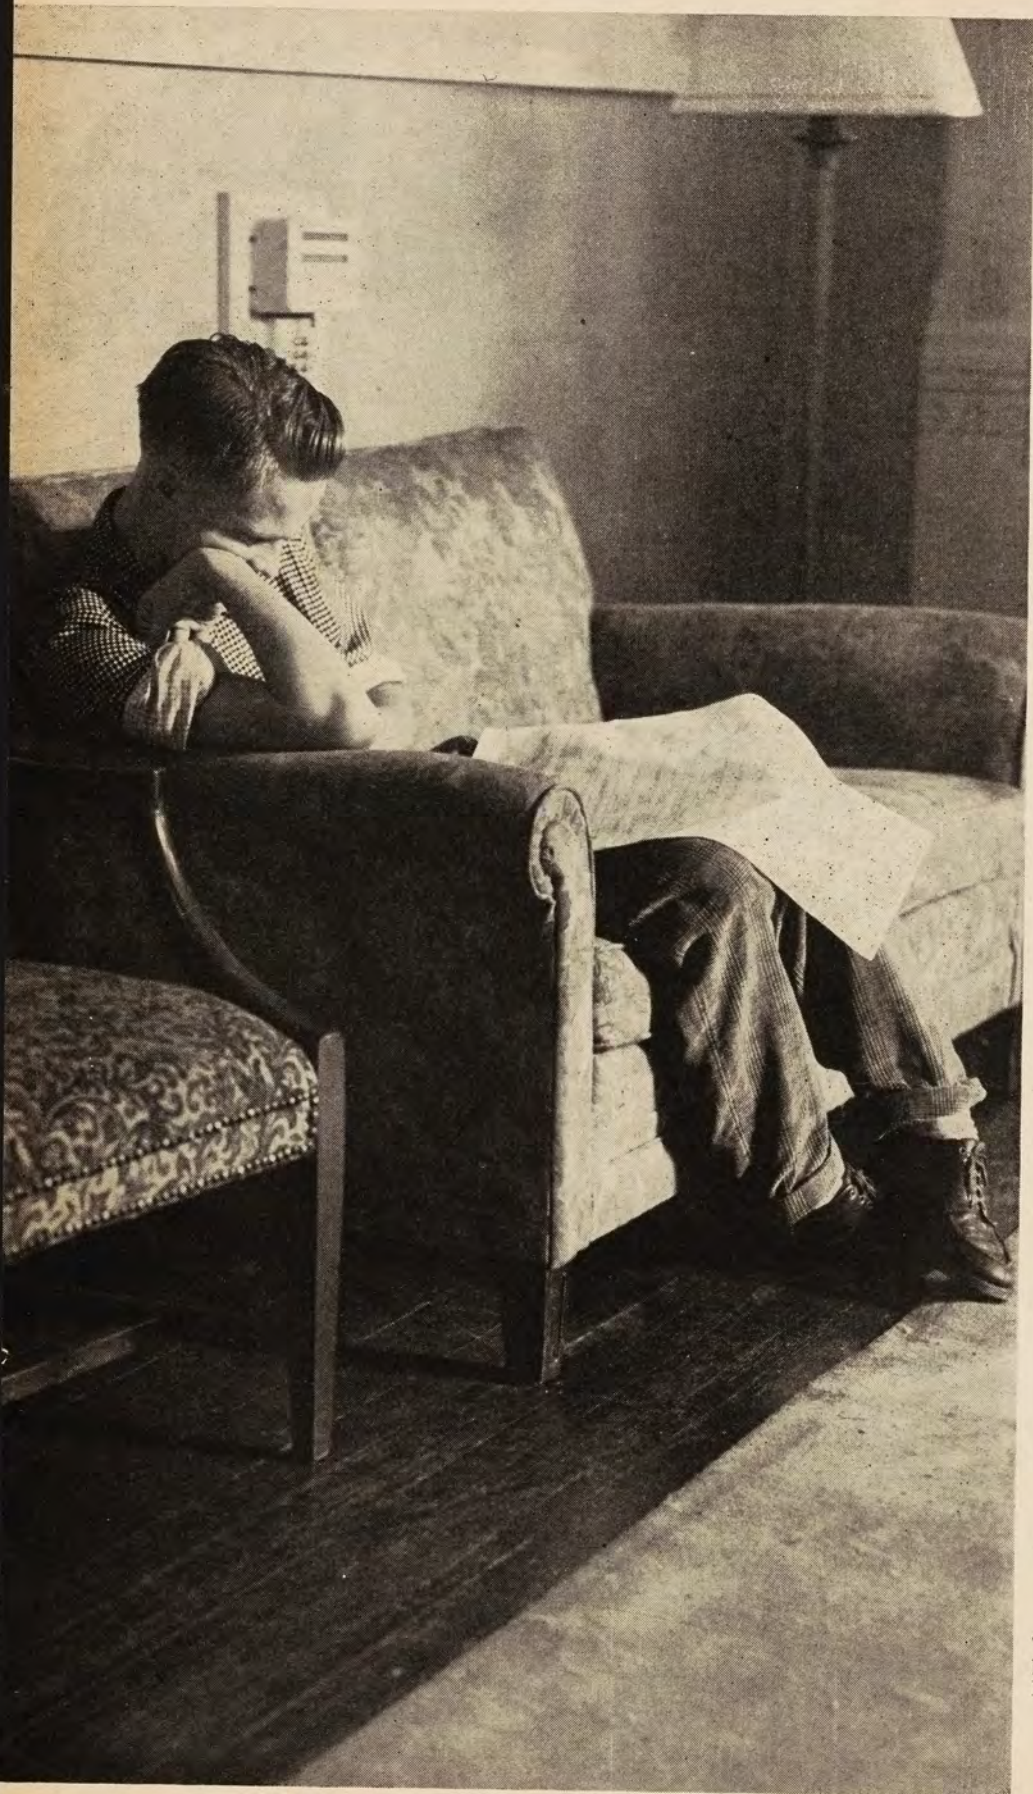

A direct outgrowth of this factor was the "old shoe" atmosphere which pervaded the convention and its workings. The fact that almost every well known national "name," and many not so well known, were there, made this meeting a great occasion for me. Jimmy Roosevelt sat across the aisle; ex-Attorney-General Francis Biddle sat directly behind me so we could and did converse often; behind him were Senator Byrd and Governor Battle. Once on the floor I stopped Rudolph Halley to see if he had a copy of the latest resolution drafted by the liberal caucus to unseat the three Southern states. He not only gave me his only personal copy but explained its contents to me. Following the opening session, I went out on the rostrum to look over the huge hall, only to find Governor Dever there worrying about the facilities for his keynote address that night.

Since I had seen and was to see more of some of these people in caucus meetings all of this added to my personal understanding and enjoyment of the convention.

In addition to all this, I also struck out on my own. I drafted a plank on 18-year-old voting and was trying to get some support for it after it failed to win acceptance in the platform committee. Our governor, also head of our delegation, had agreed to support it, and I was at the mike shouting for recognition when Rep. McCormack finished reading the platform. Rayburn gavelled the platform through without any debate; but I felt I learned quite a bit in this attempt to take part in the convention process.

It was an unforgettable experience to have been present at the meeting which has nominated "the next president of the United States."

The early sense of loneliness is soon dispelled by Freshman Week activity.

Freshman Week

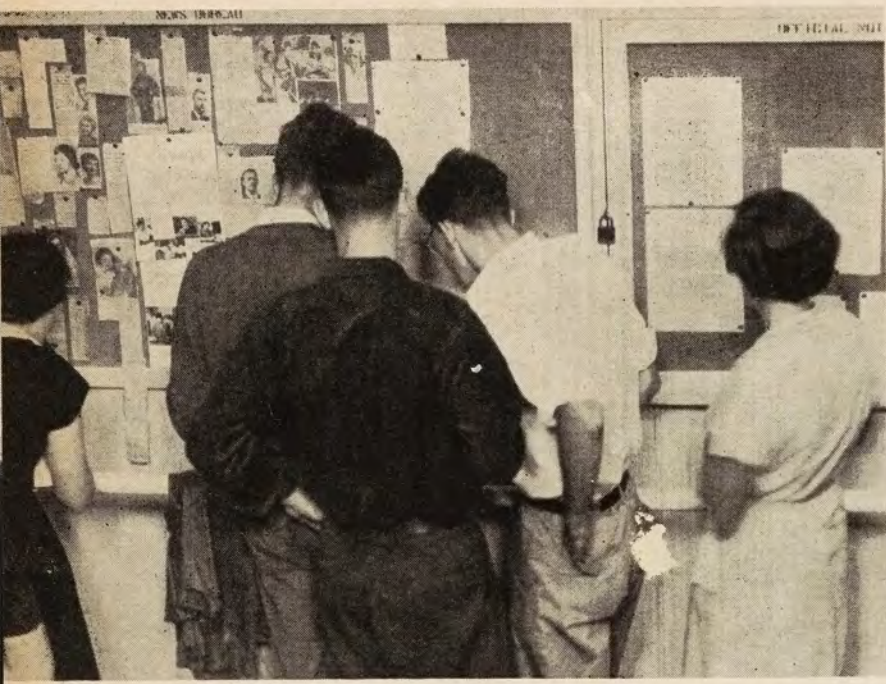

It helps new arrivals at Swarthmore get acquainted, learn new customs

On September 18, 255 freshmen arrived on the campus. Some came with their parents, others came alone. But to all of them it meant they were soon to "on their own"—some perhaps for the first time in their lives—away from home, family, childhood friends. This is what it meant to many to go to college.

Today the shock of this transition is not so drastic as it once was, thanks to the institution of Freshman Week. At Swarthmore College the "week" is actually only four days, but they are jam-packed and devoted only to the needs of the new student. The highly organized plan which greets the freshman upon his arrival helps him make new friends, get to know the campus, learn new customs, and—when the time classes start four days later—to realize that going to college was not so much of a problem after all.

Freshman Week revolves around the official bulletin board in Parrish. Here the newcomer learns who his faculty course adviser will be for the next year, when he is to take his physical examination. Left, a group of freshmen inspect the newly posted lists.

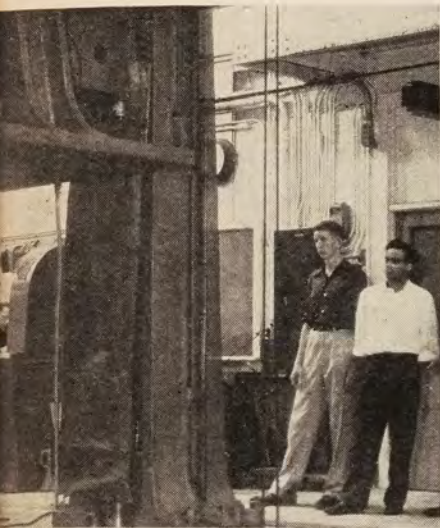

Each student meets with a faculty adviser who helps him map out his first course of studies.

Every student receives a thorough physical examination before the semester starts.

point of interest to freshmen engineers is 300 ton testing machine in Beardsley.

Here a group of freshmen leave Martin Building on the last leg of a tour of the campus.

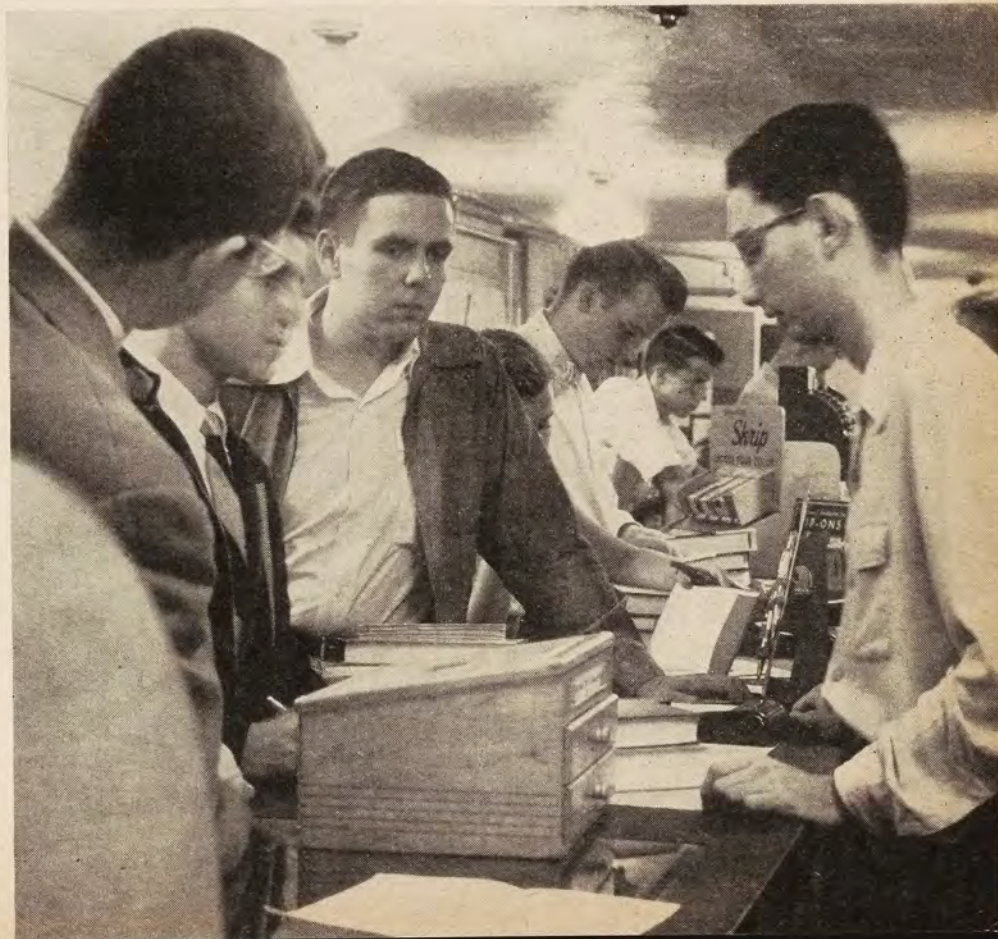

Students inspect a display of books and magazine articles in which names like Brooks and Aydelotte are featured.

ENDING and BEGINNING

As the "week" draws to a close and the first day of classes approaches, the freshmen take stock. They find they have learned a lot in the event-packed days since they came to Swarthmore. They know the names of many fellow freshmen, even know a number of upperclass leaders who have assisted in their orientation, and are on the way to making those closely knit friendships which characterize college days. They have been introduced to the churches of Swarthmore; at a "mixer" dance, a softball game and a picnic they have met and mingled with their classmates-to-be; they have listened to and been entertained by the president of the college.

And (right) they have bought their first books. The real work is now about to begin.

NEW ASSISTANT DEAN

Deborah Wing '38 (above) is the new assistant dean of women replacing Barbara Colbron, who resigned to become headmistress of the Spence School of New York.

Miss Wing is a native of Newton, Mass. Her classmates will remember her as an active member of the hockey and swimming teams, as a "paint dauber" for the LTC, and a member of the Outing Club.

In her new administrative position, Deborah fulfills an ambition which she formed while still an undergraduate, that is, to become a school administrator. Rather than seek such a post directly, however, she was advised to go into teaching. This she did, first at Germantown Friends, then at Shippen School, Lancaster, Pa. and at Lincoln School, Providence, R. I. For the past six years Deborah has been head of the English Department at the Katharine Branson School, in San Francisco. In 1944 she acquired an MA in Teaching at Radcliffe.

Now, fourteen years and numberless class-sessions later, she has embarked on the career which interested her most when she graduated. Still the pleasant and alert person her classmates remember, she will be an able addition to the Deans' Office.

AYDELOTTE RETIRES FROM RHODES POST

Dr. Frank Aydelotte, former president of Swarthmore College, will retire next January as American Secretary to the Rhodes Scholarships, a post he has held for the past thirty-five years.

The modified Oxford system of education, known as the Swarthmore Plan, introduced by Dr. Aydelotte in 1921, when he became president of the College, made both him and the college famous in the education world. This system grew out of his own experiences as a Rhodes Scholar.

In his position as American Secretary he was directly responsible for a more even distribution of the Rhodes Scholarships in this country. The Philadelphia Bulletin in an editorial comment upon the public announcement of his retirement said, "his competence . . . lies in his real love of learning and an understanding, based on his own experiences as a Rhodes scholar. He has shown himself a distinguished educator, no less than a true friend of scholars."

Dr. Aydelotte plans to continue his association with the Institute for Advanced Study in Princeton, N. J.

"CRIME" MARCHES ON

"The Crime," a two-reel motion picture written, acted, directed and produced by students of Swarthmore College in June, 1950, was given additional honors recently when it was selected for distribution by one of the outstanding distributors of experimental movies in the U. S., Brandon Films, and was entered by them and accepted for showing in the Edinburgh (Scotland) International Film Festival.

In the annals of Swarthmoreana the production of this film, believed by its student producers to have been the first done by college people on professional gauge film with a sound track, is one of the most fascinating. Adapted from a one-act play by John Weigel '50 which won the One-Act Play Contest that spring, the picture presents a modern version of the Adam and Eve story. Written and narrated in free verse, it is an allegorical re-enactment of the Fall.

Camera equipment was rented from a New York firm for a 24-hour period for the production. With the arrival on campus of this $20,000 worth of machinery the already assembled crew and cast went to work to produce their movie within the rental time limit.

All through the night the students worked, moving props and lights, shooting close-ups, long and medium shots. Because of technical difficulties and the problem of working with inexperienced actors, there was no time to shoot any footage for the second time, no time to check for mechanical failure, only time to complete a quick run through of the play before camera and microphone. At noon the next day they emerged from their "studio," Clothier Auditorium, tired but triumphant.

That afternoon a Model A Ford pulled into New York only minutes before the camera rental deadline. Another fevered and expensive hour was spent in the RCA film studios transferring the tape recordings made at Swarthmore onto the film. Finally, all that remained to be done was the highly technical and crucial job of cutting the film.

In charge of the entire production were Theodore Conant '51, son of James B. Conant, president of Harvard, and Frank Kensill '51. It was they who were first attracted by the film possibilities of Weigle's play.

The total cost of the film, backed by the students themselves, was about $1,000, or one-twentieth of what it costs to produce such a film professionally.

After its release it was shown at several Philadelphia suburban theatres and received nation-wide publicity.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

In the June GARNET LETTER we printed an article about the war experiences of Franz von Bitter of the class of 1933 which we had requested from him. During the summer we received a few letters concerning the article. We are printing one of the letters which is most representative of the sentiments expressed.

To the Editor:

I am, I fear, not an active, but always an interested alumna ('30) and I am therefore writing you after a good deal of pondering to voice my disquiet at a letter which was partially quoted and to some extent paraphrased, in the June 1952 issue of the GARNET LETTER. I refer to the item concerning Franz von Bitter (his class was not given) headlined "Swarthmorean POW of Russians in World War II."

Mr. von Bitter dwelt in some detail on the poverty of the Russians, the terrible conditions in Russia during and after the war, and the mistreatment suffered by German POW's. The amazing thing was that one read the letter with the feeling that these were the experiences of an American soldier—only to realize that this letter and these experiences are those of a former officer in the German army—Hitler's Nazi army, at a time when we were allies of Russia and at war with Nazi Germany.

I happen to agree very strongly with the position taken by the Friends and made public in several documents, that it is vital that we find some means of living at peace with Russia and with a society differently organized from ours. I am, therefore, all the more startled to find my college alumni paper giving space to the view of a former German soldier regarding a country he helped to ravage, and about a people who paid with ten million civilian lives for Hitler's invasion of their country.

Mr. von Bitter describes what he considers the ill-treatment of German prisoners by the Russians. What about the atrocities inflicted on the Russian civilian population by the Nazis (well-documented during the war by many American authorities)? He mentions that 30,000 POW's died of malnutrition near Stalingrad—who ravaged the country in the first place? How many Russians died in defense of Stalingrad, a name the American people thrilled to in those dark days of 1942! What about the wrongdoings of the Nazi regime with its concentration camps, its extermination of 6,000,000 Jews, etc.

I like to read the GARNET LETTER for its news of the doings and achievements of old friends and acquaintances. It, if it is to become a means of propaganda, let us at least be sure of our sources and their objectivity. After all, how many Swarthmoreans lost their lives in the war to end fascism?
