If a self addressed, stamped envelope accompanies the request they will be mailed.

The College

The Caroline Robinson House, a bequest of the late Louis N. Robinson, opened its doors to incoming students on Thursday, September 15th. This lovely old home has been completely redecorated and in some cases actual structural changes made to turn it into a dormitory for women students. Maralyn Orbison '49, new assistant dean of women, will serve as head resident of the dormitory. The house will be open for inspection on Homecoming Day, Oct. 22nd.

Appointments

William C. Denison who holds A.B. and A.M. degrees from Oberlin College, will serve as Instructor in Biology during the absence of Neal A. Weber who is on leave during 1955-56.

Lee F. Gerlach, Ph.D. from the University of Michigan, will serve as Instructor in English during the absence of Stephen E. Whicher who is traveling to Sweden to teach at the University of Upsala during this academic year.

Franz H. Mautner has been appointed as Associate Professor of German to fill the vacancy left by the retirement of Miss Lydia Baer. Dr. Mautner comes to Swarthmore from Sarah Lawrence and Queens Colleges in New York.

Assistant Professor of Music and Director of the Chorus will be Peter Gram Swing. The Music Department has expanded its chorus offerings for this year and Mr. Swing will be assisting Dr. Swan and William H. Reese in presenting these new fields.

Jerome A. Shaffer, Instructor in Philosophy, will present a course in Ancient Philosophy and together with Monroe Beardsley will teach Philosophical Classics. For the Honors students in this field Mr. Shaffer will offer the seminar on Plato.

Lecturer in Political Science this year will be Henry J. Abraham who is also associated with the University of Pennsylvania.

Added to the Department of Psychology and Education is Allen Parducci who will serve as Assistant Professor in this field.

On Leave

In addition to those mentioned above the following members of the faculty will be absent on leave during the fall semester: Solomon E. Asch, L. R. Shero, Dennison Bancroft, Philip D. Curtin (part-time), Merton J. Willis, and Willis D. Weatherford. Peter van de Kamp has returned from his duties in Washington with the National Science Foundation. Helen North returns from teaching at Barnard College and will serve as Chairman of the Classics Department in the absence of L. R. Shero. Joseph D. Conrad is back from Princeton where he has been engaged in teaching and research. Filled with memories of the Art and Architecture of Italy, Hedley Rhys returns to the Art Department to share his discoveries with the less fortunate. In the History Department James Field will resume his interesting lectures after a year's absence in Newport, Rhode Island where he was teaching at the Naval War College.

Another familiar face that has been missed on the campus is that of Gerard Mangone in the Dept. of Political Science. Dr. Mangone has been doing research in Europe for the past year. Two well known members of the Psychology Dept. take up their teaching responsibilities again this semester—Hans Wallach, returning from a year in Princeton, and Peter Madison who has spent the past year in Oregon.

The Class of 1959

118 men and 112 women have been admitted to the College as the Class of 1959. Early glimpses of this group reveal them to be a rather impressive lot made up of numerous secondary school class presidents, newspaper editors, musicians, and orators. All have passed the first intelligence test offered by the College—opening the combination locks on the new mail boxes in the College post office. As usual the various upper classmen responsible for extra-curricular activities have descended upon the group en masse to attract prospective members to their respective activities. Interest in the orchestra and chorus seems to be running a close second to the Little Theatre Club and WSRN.

Improvements

In addition to the new dormitory for women substantial changes have been wrought in Wharton Hall. New tile floors in many sections, two newly furnished and decorated social rooms in "C" and "D" basements, plus painting in all areas greeted the men as they returned for another semester.

The Ruff Herndon rooms in the Lamb-Miller Field House are nearing completion as is the grading and resurfacing of the Clothier Fields. Reconstruction in the basement of Hall Gymnasium has been finished preparatory to turning this area over to Women's Athletics.

Women residents of Parrish Hall were greeted by new metal wardrobes in the upper halls to replace the old garment bags that have detracted from the generally pleasant atmosphere of the dormitory.

All in all, the various crews of the superintendent's and house director's offices have done a remarkable job in preparing for a new year at Swarthmore College.

The Undergraduate

Why I Chose Swarthmore

by Stephan Robert Cavior

CAMPUS RAMBLINGS

My generation has witnessed only a few primitive attempts to civilize the atom, though the peaceful potentials of this energy source are infinitely promising. As an automation engineer I want to design the machinery which will put foundations under this promise. Because a first-class engineer today must be not only a capable technician but a creative thinker and an understanding human being, I have chosen Swarthmore in order to learn best about myself and my society while I learn about the natural world. Beyond professional knowledge I want to acquire a greater open-mindedness and cooperative attitude to fulfill effectively my role as family leader and community member. I want to supplement my technical training with humanistic study, in order to perceive man's dual character as object and master of physical forces, as inheritor, conservator, and imaginative architect of his own civilization.

I believe Swarthmore is conducive to discovering these important, vigorous truths because it is a community of learning with a hard intellectual core. Freshmen candidates in engineering benefit from the qualified instruction by learning how to formulate primary concepts. When I visited Swarthmore in the spring of my senior year in high school, I saw many classes continue informally with a few interested students long after the periods had officially run their course. The professors were neither proud nor preoccupied. This is inconceivable at a mammoth campus, where close supervision and encouragement of this nature is truly a fossil, too.

I hope to develop emotionally as well as intellectually in the friendly tradition of Swarthmore. The lessons and experiences of college do not dissipate there in a spiritual vacuum but are applied toward achieving a well-informed conscience.

Most exciting prospect of all, that enriching of personality called social growth, demands a measure of self-discovery. I anticipate this at Swarthmore because its relatively intimate character will enable me to find students who share my interests and to appreciate the different views of others. How I react to the personalities and situations I encounter will determine experimentally what my preferences actually are. The Swarthmore community of 850 persons appears one of unaffected enthusiasm. In school projects I want to have the responsibilities of an active participant, not the unearned prestige of an indifferent supporter. Also, in a natural community of both men and women one learns to make the wise appraisals of character and situation which the social world demands.

To make my final decision, I measured the actual representatives against the ideal model of Swarthmore graduates as I had imagined the various features of the college would produce. Alumni I met impressed me as intelligent, purposeful, and affable, as well-grounded in books and sports as in politics and theater. In evaluating the college, they enthusiastically confirmed my week end's observation that a program of exacting curriculum and well-organized activity educates the human being purposefully. I chose Swarthmore precisely to qualify for that education.

Stephan Robert Cavior of Brookline, Mass., is a contest winner. In the summer of 1954 he made a 20,000 mile voyage to Africa as a prize winner in a contest sponsored by the Propellers Club on the subject of "The American Merchant Marine . . . Lifeline of Industry." This year Steve entered an essay contest sponsored by the Speed Products Co. of Long Island City, N. Y. His essay on "Why I Want to Go to College" won him a $3,000 scholarship to Swarthmore.*

Traditionally it is spring that is the season of hope and promise, but at a college it is fall. Indeed, spring sees the fruition of many a promise solemnly made in September. Every year the freshman plans to juggle work, fun, and sleep in proper portions. The returning upperclassmen review past mistakes and vow to change whatever seemed wrong in their way of life. The senior swears not to panic at comprehensives or honors exams, and then sneaks frightened glances at the reading lists before him. In short, the first few days of school bear little resemblance to the realities of life in the semesters ahead.

In the spring many students think wistfully what a lovely country club Swarthmore would make—without the work, of course. The opening days of freshman orientation come the nearest to that ideal, and it must be for that reason that upperclassmen, whose connection with freshman placement is at best tenuous, try to come back long before the official notice invites them. The weather is delightful; not Indian summer but the tail end of summer itself. The grass, after the drought and the flood, is green, and relatively unmarred by the trampled paths soon to appear. The dormitories, though smelling of hot months with closed doors, are clean. The unsettling clean-ups during vacations can't equal the job done over the summer, and he who would enjoy shiny floors and spotless corners must come early. Too, the dining room does its best to impress the new students, though they could never be accused of ostentation along these lines. But even routine college food smells good to the upperclassmen trying to convince the dining room bouncers that they have a valid reason for an early return. Diligently comparing faces against lists, the official greeters turn away some who obviously can't account for their presence, though somehow the number of people at any one meal seems much greater than the number of names on the approved list.

For the freshman the first few days bear equally little resemblance to what lies in store. Never again will he be so tea-ed, lectured, and examined, not even at graduation. Perhaps one function of the freshman program is to keep the new student from thinking about what the future may bring, for he has little enough time for new impressions to sink in and digest until classes actually start. No amount of warning and advice can make really clear to the freshman what life at college will be like, and when as a sophomore he tries to help the next crop of newcomers he will be equally unable to pass on what he has learned. Alternating between encouragement and intimidation the faculty, administration, and other students discuss the essentials of Swarthmore life as the freshmen listen.

The burning questions are: "How much time should I spend studying?" "How many extra-curriculars can I join and still pass five courses?" "How important are fraternities?" "What kind of social life can I expect?" It takes four years to answer them thoroughly, and at graduation there will be as many different answers as there are diplomas.

Some features of the fall season are shared by all students. Everyone shares summer experiences, and finds that the grass was greener on everyone else's side of the fence. For many this means comparing itineraries in Europe and debating the merits of one hostel or nightclub over another, while those who stayed home listen in envious silence. Workers tell of fat bank rolls to see them through the long winter ahead and then those long days on the beach seem less and less attractive.

Perhaps the rumors and fascinating tidbits about professorial comings and goings mean less to the freshman than to the other three classes, but they do serve to make his first few sessions more eagerly awaited. All four classes endure physical exams, and while shivering in lines try to decipher the hieroglyphics in which their lives and fortunes are recorded.

Since classes start on Tuesday, the interminable question of a program for the fall is answered at registration on Monday, and even after that there are people scurrying madly about to make last-minute changes. Monday night finds all students enjoying the last moments of freedom.

Food Package to Friendship

David H. Scull '36 and family of Annandale, Virginia, greeting Rolf Greenrose and family on their arrival from Finland.

One Sunday last May five very nervous and excited former residents of Helsinki, Finland arrived in Annandale, Virginia. Their arrival in this country was the climax of an eight year friendship with the David Scull ('36) family who sponsored their immigration.

Initial contact between the two families was established in 1947 when the Sculls received a thank you note from Finland for a CARE food package that had been sent to help the needy in war-stricken Europe. The package was given to Rolf Gronroos to help his family of five through the winter.

The Sculls replied and the correspondence grew quickly into an exchange of letters almost weekly.

Getting up for 8 o'clocks, traditionally a freshman prerogative, becomes a widespread habit, since it seems inappropriate to cut the first meeting. And so, with the beginning of classes and seminars the year really begins. Chances are it won't turn out as expected. Whether better or worse it will be different, and next June it will be interesting to compare the last letters home with the first.

Franny King '56

With Rolf Gronroos came his wife and their three children, Pauli, 11; his brother, Pentti, 10, and their 7 year old sister, Pirkko.

The ages of the Finnish children correspond closely with two of the four young Sculls, David, 11; Priscilla, 9; Barbara, 4; and Jonathan who will be 1 year old on October 10th.

The Sculls arranged for a house for the new visitors in their own Annandale and the children will go to the Burgundy Country Day School in Alexandria, which the Sculls attend.

Americanization has already started since the rather difficult Gronroos will probably be changed to Greenrose and little Pauli's name shortened to Paul.

David Scull had for a number of years been associated with the U.S. Department of State but in 1953 returned to Annandale to take over his father's printing business. Mrs. Scull is the former Laurel DeMeritt. In speaking of their first personal contact with the Finnish family she said that it was amazing how well they all got along with two dictionaries the Gronrooses brought with them and the "universal sign language that everybody can understand."

BURMA—1955

A report by John Seabury Thomson '43 who spent last year in the Far East on a Ford Foundation Fellowship.

This "letter from Burma," written in Madison, Wisconsin grows out of a Ford Fellowship I have been holding this past year for research into Burmese foreign policy. In late 1953 when I was applying for a grant to the Far East, Burma appealed especially as it seemed in its first few years of independence to be doing the finest job among the countries of Southeast Asia of overcoming its internal problems and meeting the threat of Communism. Justice Douglas's book "North from Malaya" gave an intriguing glimpse of what might be found in Burma and I was impressed with the dignity with which this small neutral country had cancelled America's economic aid even while showing her real appreciation for it. Burma continued to employ the American advisors and in September, 1953 made the unique gesture of presenting the United States with $10,000 for tornado relief.

My ticket was for a round-the-world air coach flight with stopover privileges. (It was pleasant to discover that this was an economy measure—it is cheaper to go 'round the world than Madison to Rangoon and return.) The only drawback to such a trip is that none of the stopovers can be long enough and that 44 pounds of baggage even with modern-age tissue paper suits doesn't go far for a year.

I began with three sun-filled days in Hawaii with Bob and Betsy Coleman '43 at their Lanikai home and 12 days in Japan with my parents at the Japanese International Christian University in the suburbs of Tokyo. During my week in Hong Kong, between cable car rides to the peak to enjoy the magnificent view of the city and its harbor and necessary trips to the tailor for British-style tropical wear suited to the dhobi wash, I tried to see as much of the Chinese refugee community as possible. With the communist victory on the mainland, Hong Kong's population has jumped from 750,000 to nearly 2,500,000. The three groups I talked to were refugee students from the mainland—a real workout for my rusty Chinese. All claimed to be "Third Force" supporters, looking for a new China neither communist nor Nationalist. They left me sympathetic and sad. They had the great weakness of most refugee groups—no unity, no common plan or leader—and each group separately warned me that the others were either Nationalists or Communists under cover.

Bangkok I visited twice, once in September on my way to Rangoon and again in April en route to Singapore. (A Swarthmore visit again with Terry Haviland Farrior, '42, and her husband John of the U. S. Embassy.) As a political scientist I was impressed with the apparent weakness of our only Southeast Asian mainland ally in terms of political convictions. There seemed to be almost no popular concern with the government or its policies. As a tourist I was delighted with the colorful and booming city, its temples, handcrafts and on my second visit after beefless Burma, steaks.

Arriving in Rangoon is quite different from arriving in Bangkok where I had seen the full moon reflected in endless miles of flooded rice fields. In the low rolling land approaching Rangoon the golden spire of the Shwedagon Pagoda rises high above the city, a landmark for the traveler by air or sea. For nearly two thousand years the Shwedagon surrounded by myriads of smaller shrines has been the center of Rangoon's religious and festival life. Its four entrances, up flights of steps from the north, south, east and west, are lined with stalls selling everything from images of Buddha to charcoal-burning irons, books, shoes, musical instruments, flowers and food. Everyone visits the Shwedagon (I was drawn there again and again) and everyone goes barefoot on its sanctified grounds. During the November festival of the lights (full moon) I joined the holiday crowds at the pagoda to watch the finals of the weaving contest. Five Burmese women raced to complete a saffron Buddhist monk's robe before daylight. It was like a fair with cheering clagues, official time-outs to check the work and refreshment booths set up among the shrines. It was somewhat surprising to see a table of food for the Nats (pre-buddhistic spirits) decorated with a familiar flying red horse, the offering of Stanvac employees.

Cosmopolitan as Rangoon is, there is surprisingly little Western dress. Everywhere women wear their colorful longyis and sheer nylon aingyis. Men wear similar longyis, collar-less shirts and round silk gombuns—skull caps in pale shades of pink, blue and yellow.

While I was still in Japan the Swiss theologian, Emil Brunner, described Burma's Prime Minister to me as "the unique combination of statesman and Buddhist Saint," and everything I saw and heard of U Nu during my stay impressed me that this was true. Burmese friends rightly add that U Nu is also an astute politician. U Nu's deep religious conviction permeates all his activities and his sincerity, warmth, tolerance and essential goodness make him the one man in Burma who is universally admired and respected. Abroad, and especially in Asia, the quality of his leadership has given Burmese proposals a significance far out of proportion to the country's material power. The Burmese Government has the reputation for the least corruption in Asia—and the credit rests squarely with U Nu and the example he sets.

Rangoon life was full and interesting. Most of my time was spent between the University, where I lived in one of the instructors' hostels and taught a course in Far Eastern History, the Ford Office downtown, and the newspaper offices going through back files and trying to keep up on current developments. Nehru, Nasser, Tito, Chou En-lai, Dulles, Eden and the King of Cambodia all visited Rangoon during the year. U Nu's trip to China, the Bangkok Conference and Bandung filled the papers and the settlement of the reparations question with Japan brought in a growing flood of Japanese government and business representatives. City elections were held in which the AFPFL (government party) won all but two seats—and immediately investigated to find why it had lost two. Interspersed among news articles of local and international concern were accounts of insurgent activity and attacks on the main railways—bridges blown and trains delayed.

Tito's visit was probably the high point of Burma's social calendar, outshining Nehru, Chou En-lai and Nasser. Crowds lined the streets for hours waving flags (and there was no built-in Yugoslav colony to man the claque). Festival arches raised over the main streets for Independence Day bore signs in Burmese, Serbo-Croatian and English: "Long Live President Tito! Long Live President U Ba U!" Newspapers promoted a myth that Yugoslav aid had saved Burma from its insurgents. (Actually, at other times the Burmese have always given Britain the credit.) Tito was given an honorary degree from the University of Rangoon with all the customary pomp and pageantry—and one special addition. While Tito addressed the Special Convocation in Serbo-Croatian and U Nu in Burmese, the audience read both speeches in English.

The University itself is quite remarkable. Prior to the war it was considered the best in Southeast Asia, but the war has destroyed its library, independence has taken away the British members of its faculty and the need for trained leadership has pushed its enrollment up from 800 to nearly 9,000. One thing has not changed: student radicals. Anti-government "Progressives" control the student body as they did in the 1930's. (Ex-student radical leader U Nu went out of his way during his visit to England this year to apologize to the former Principal of University College, Rangoon, for the strikes he had led.) Of course, in this period of chaotic change the standards have slipped and it was most reassuring this June to see that the faculty is tightening up again. As always, the best students of Burma are equal to the best of the world.

Rangoon, however, is not Burma and to get a better idea of the country I decided to travel north to Myitkyina. The reports of insurgent trouble are correct. Travel seemed remarkably peaceful and regular, but the Mandalay Mail on which I started out ran only by day and was preceded by an armed guard train. The trip to Mandalay took three days, instead of two. A land mine was sighted on the tracks so we pulled back to the nearest station, second class passengers rented cots from the Station Master and we all settled down for the night while the mine was removed.

The country is still war torn. But riding through it I thought the farms and peasants looked prosperous. Ox-carts creaked peacefully through the dusty heat and only the occasional wreckage along the tracks reminded one of the troubled conditions. From Mandalay to Myitkyina I traveled by jeep with an elaborate escort which the Commissioner in Mandalay insisted I accept. Ten armed police in two jeeps bracketed me, racing through the magnificent scenery of Upper Burma. The net result: lots of dust, two extra vehicles to boil over and repair and generally a much more conspicuous target had any bandits been interested. Fortunately this unwanted honor left me when I reached Namkam and Dr. Seagrave's hospital on the China border. This visit to the "Burma Surgeon" was the high point of my trip north.

One of the real pleasures of the trip was the warmth and enthusiasm of my welcome at each town. The people seemed delighted that an American should be interested in visiting their portion of Burma. Officials were extremely cooperative at all times. In Lashio, where I needed a special permit to allow me to travel further north through a "war zone," I had to see the Special Commissioner for the area—and found him watching the Shan States tennis finals in the cool of a Sunday evening. The Baptist missionaries, the American G.I. of World War II and the United States Information Service have built up a reservoir of good will for the United States and in Burma it is flattering indeed to be taken as a representative of the American government.

Myitkyina and Bhamo, which figured prominently in the Burma Campaign of World War II, are both new towns, built on the ruins of the violent fighting. But here, as everywhere else in Burma, I was impressed by the independent self-sufficiency, apparent good humor and sturdy optimism of the country people.

I left my jeep at Bhamo and traveled back to Mandalay by stern-wheeler down the Irrawaddy. We passed through wild undeveloped country (where Yugoslav scientists are helping with mineral exploration), stopped at towns and small villages where crowds gathered at the landings to meet the boat, which is almost their only tie with the outside world, and loaded cargoes of rice, pottery, dried fish and passengers. (Up river the cargo is kerosene and manufactured goods.) Again the atmosphere was one of peace and tranquility despite the boiler plate armor around the bridge and first class cabins. (We did, however, pass one large brilliantly lit town at night without stopping—"insurgent-held," the captain explained.)

Oxen-drawn carts wait to unload a boat on the Irrawaddy.

My trips in Burma gave me an idea of her domestic problems and the trips to surrounding countries gave me a basis for comparison. (On my way home I spent three weeks in India visiting Calcutta, Delhi, Jaipur and Kashmir. Mere mention of Kashmir makes me reach for my colored slides, but that is another story.) For all her many problems, the active public interest in government policies is building for a stronger and more stable democracy than can be found in Thailand, she is far more likely to succeed in putting down her insurgents than are the British in Malaya because she is fighting them as an independent country and, for all India's far greater economic development, Burma has a far more rational and realistic evaluation of problems of foreign policy.

When I told Burmese friends in Rangoon that I was there to study their foreign policy, most of them hoped that I would understand their neutralism. Neutralism for Burma is her best choice. She can not compete with her larger neighbors militarily, she can not spare any of her economic resources for foreign commitments and psychologically, having recently been a battlefield, she wants no part of war. Though Burma is oriented politically toward the Western-type democracies, she can not afford to antagonize China by alignment with the West—the tremendous size of China and the long undefined Sino-Burmese border put this out of the question. U Nu said to our Congress "both of our nations adopted in their early years an independent foreign policy, designed to maintain the friendship of all nations and to avoid big-power alliances. You are aware that this policy of ours is not without its critics. Nor, for that matter, was yours."

But Burma is more than passively neutral. Her leaders have consistently urged universal membership in the United Nations and Burma was one of the sponsors of the Afro-Asian Conference at Bandung. She has sent students abroad and welcomed students to Burma. Through these actions Burma has walked the tightrope between the world's two blocs and, more than that, has tried to convert the tightrope into a bridge of understanding. The Burmese concept of neutralism is paying dividends for the world already. Tied to one of the power blocs Burmese influence would be lost in the larger mass. However, standing alone, but not aloof, under the leadership of men like U Nu, Burma is emerging as a significant moral force in world affairs.

Industrial Scholarship Winners Announced

Dean Everett L. Hunt has announced the winners of several of the Industrial Scholarships granted to upper classmen. Chosen to hold the scholarship presented annually by the American Cyanamid Company was Carl vonFrankenberg of Swarthmore, Pa. The award received from the American Viscose Corporation has been presented to Charles Odenweller of Princeton, N.J. The Radio Corporation of America scholarship will go to Robert Potthoff of Urbana, Illinois. Recipient of the Westinghouse scholarship this year is Roger Levien of Brooklyn, N.Y.

Each of these companies has organized an extensive program of assistance to educational institutions on a national basis. Selection of the recipient is entirely in the hands of the Committee on Scholarships of the College.

Carl vonFrankenberg is reading for Honors in Chemistry and plans to go on to graduate school following receipt of his Bachelor's degree in 1956. Odenweller will enter upon a program leading to Honors in Electrical Engineering next year. He is a sophomore. Both Potthoff and Levien are juniors majoring in Mechanical Engineering and will probably seek employment in this field upon graduating in 1956.

Dean Hunt also announced that Thomas K. Glennan, Jr. of Cleveland, Ohio would be the recipient of the Scott Award for this year. This grant, presented annually to a Sophomore student who plans to enter business after graduation, is given by Scott Paper Company Foundation in honor of Arthur Hoyt Scott, former president of Scott Paper Company and an 1895 graduate of Swarthmore College.

The Scott Award was established in 1953 as an experiment "to determine if the company and the college can benefit mutually through corporate support of private institutions of higher learning." The experiment is to run for five years at which time the success of the program will be examined by both the company and the college.

Glennan is the son of the President of Case Institute of Tech. of Cleveland, Ohio. He will major in Electrical Engineering beginning next year and has been interested in Physics and Engineering for some time; particularly as these sciences are related to business. Tom is a member of the athletic managers' association at Swarthmore, plays Lacrosse and at the present time is busy as chairman of a committee to survey the history of student government of the College. He is a member of Phi Delta Theta Fraternity, is a member of the yearbook staff, and next year will be Manager for the Varsity Soccer Team.

The first recipient of the Scott Award was Henry J. Bode, Jr. of Rumford, R.I. who will begin his career with Scott Paper Company this summer. J. Lawrence Shane was the winner last year and is continuing his work in Mechanical Engineering at Swarthmore.

ALUMNI IN THE NEWS

Smith Promoted

Promotion of F. Gordon Smith '40 to Director of Sales Promotion was announced recently by International Business Machines Corporation.

Mr. Smith became associated with the IBM organization as an Assistant Sales Representative in Philadelphia in 1940. Since that time he has held positions of increasing responsibility in West Virginia, Pennsylvania, and Illinois.

F. Gordon Smith '40

Gordon Smith's new responsibility will be in the Chicago area where he has worked since 1952.

Married to the former Alice E. Robinson '41, the Smiths now reside at 761 Foxdale, Winnetka, Illinois. They have three children, Fred, Jr., Alice and Sarah.

Wool Grower Chosen

John H. Breckenridge '38 is the youngest officer ever to be elected as President of the National Wool Growers Association. Selected last April, John will preside over the annual meeting of the association at Fort Worth, Texas next December.

Although a major in Chemistry at Swarthmore, "Long John" has been interested in the sheep raising business since he returned to Twin Falls, Idaho after graduation. He was president of the Idaho Wool Growers Association from 1947 to 1949 and served as vice-president for two years previously. He has been a frequent visitor to Washington to discuss problems of the sheep industry.

In addition to his work with the above organizations, John Breckenridge takes an active part in civic affairs. He is a leading member of the Citizens School Planning Committee and was recently appointed to the board of the Magic Valley Memorial Hospital.

Mrs. Breckenridge will be remembered as Miriam Booth '38. They have four daughters 15, 12, 10, and 7 respectively.

Hospital Association Elects Hay

The Hospital Association of Pennsylvania at its annual meeting in Atlantic City in May, elected George A. Hay '28 as president for this year.

Since 1941 George Hay has been in charge of the business and financial administration of the Woman's Medical College and Hospital.

During his thirteen years in the hospital field, Hay has made a distinguished record in the field of hospital administration. He was one of the original group of seven members of the Philadelphia Hospital Association who developed the basis for and established the provisional organization of the Hospital Council of Philadelphia. He has also served as vice-chairman of the Committee on Accounting and Statistics of the Hospital Council; member of the Council on Policies and Administrative Practice of the Hospital Association of Pennsylvania; member of the Committee on Public Relations of the Hospital Association of Pennsylvania; and alternate to the House of Delegates of the American Hospital Association. He is also author of numerous papers in the field of hospital administration and purchasing.

Brown Again Honored

On September 14, 1955 Kenneth R. Brown '18 was presented with the honor award of the American Chemical Society's Division of Carbohydrate Chemistry. This is the second important award won by Mr. Brown this year. Last March he received the 1955 Honor Award of the Commercial Chemical Development Association.

Kenneth R. Brown '18

The ACS Carbohydrate Division award, presented annually for outstanding achievement in the field of Carbohydrate chemistry, was given to Kenneth Brown for his pioneering work in the development of sorbitol and related carbohydrate products. (see Alumni magazine, March, 1955)

The Atlas Powder Company vice-president is the ninth chemist to receive the Carbohydrate Division's honor scroll. At the dinner honoring Mr. Brown a message from Dr. H. Jermain Creighton was read. Dr. Creighton, a former professor of Brown's at Swarthmore, conducted the initial experiments that led to the Atlas Powder Company's entry into the hexitol field.

In his address accepting the award, Kenneth Brown stressed the need for inspirational thinking in chemical research, as a balance to the purely objective approach. He said, "the sorbitol story, is the story of many individuals bending their interests, abilities and energies toward a common, exciting goal."

DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM REPORT —

Alumni Fund Sets Mark

Congratulations on a job well done! The $425,328 contributed to the College this year marks the largest amount since 1950. These gifts will permit the leaders of Swarthmore to continue to face the future with confidence and trust that the Alumni and friends of the College are behind them in their endeavors to provide a first class education for the students under their guidance.

Alumni Fund

If 3,862 Alumni can contribute $127,379 think of what we can do when all 9,000 Alumni realize the importance of this Fund. Each year it is the hope of the Alumni Fund Committee that we will really take a big jump in percentage of participation. This year, much to the disappointment of all, this figure actually dropped a few points. The thrilling factor that made an increase in total giving possible was the jump from $25.77 to $32.98 as the amount of the average gift. A great many people recognized the needs of the College and responded accordingly.

In the listings of all gifts on the following pages there is one entry that bears further comment. At the end of a number of class rolls you will find the name "General Electric" or "Scott Paper Company." This indicates that some member of that class has made a contribution which was matched by one of these companies in accordance with their corporate alumnus programs. In the first six months of this year, General Electric has matched over two thousand gifts of their employees to more than two hundred colleges and universities. Both companies are to be congratulated on this fine reaction to the problems facing institutions of higher learning.

Alumni Gifts for Special Purposes

We sometimes forget that this particular category of the Development Program comes only from Alumni and that most of the persons who contribute under this heading also make gifts to the Alumni Fund. Many individually endowed scholarships, special building projects, and other programs are supported from this source. The announcement of the 1955-56 Fund will point out how these gifts have strengthened the College in areas where the need has been severe.

Parents' Fund for Scholarships

Despite the fact that many of them were still supporting children in college, 235 parents found it possible to contribute $13,652 to this fund. Mr. Darwin Hand, Chairman of the Committee, is to be thanked for his efforts in behalf of this program. In a number of cases the Parents' Fund meant the difference in deciding whether or not a student could come to Swarthmore or would have to forego a college education.

Other Friends of Swarthmore

The individuals and organizations included under this heading have some special tie with the College and have taken this opportunity of expressing their concern for its support. This year $58,783 was contributed by this group, many of whom are faculty or board members or related to employees of the College. These funds are used for scholarships and the general expenses of the institution.

The Future

As we come to the end of this report we would like to quote from an announcement appearing in the alumni magazine of another college:

"Our unrestricted capital funds, the risk money for any institution, have been restored to a not quite comfortable amount by a large bequest of $659,104 . . . "Our endowment funds for general purposes, which are the basic asset of any college, have been increased most substantially by gifts and bequests totalling $852,586 . . ."

Altogether this particular college received over a million, eight hundred thousand dollars in gifts last year. We point to this fact not to impress you with the amount but rather to indicate that most of this money was contributed by one or two individuals. The purpose of the Swarthmore College Development Program has been to appeal to as many of the College's Alumni and friends as possible and to involve them in the annual giving program. We therefore hope that next year we will be able to include your name in the listing of those who have seen the need and responded to the call for assistance.

Ward To Head Alumni Fund

William H. Ward '15, Director, Vice President, and member of the Executive Committee of the E. I. duPont de Nemours & Company, has accepted the post of Chairman of the Alumni Fund Drive for 1955-56. As has been pointed out a number of times, it is hoped that this Fund will reach a goal of $200,000 in annual giving by 1957.

William H. Ward '15

A loyal supporter of the college, Mr. Ward has already served a term on the Board of Managers, is a permanent officer of his class, and was active in the organization of the 1915 Scholarship Fund.

After graduation from Swarthmore, he joined the duPont Company as a chemist in the Explosives Department. After eight years, he transferred to sales management activities and entered general management in 1935. He became General Manager of the Explosives Department in 1944. In 1947 he was elected Vice President and a member of the Board of Directors.

Mr. Ward is a director of the Remington Arms Company, Inc., the Norfolk & Western Railway Company, and the Manufacturing Chemists' Association.

He has been a resident of Swarthmore, Pa. since 1928 and has been active in the civic affairs of the community. He is a member of the Swarthmore Presbyterian Church and a former member of its Board of Trustees. He is married and has one daughter, Mrs. Robert F. Cox.
