In show business, struggle is continual and success is rare, but for these Swarthmoreans this precarious life is the only one worth living.

By Nancy Smith and Hope Wohl

Reflecting on his undergraduate years, James A. Michener '29 commented: "We were not very big in music, we did very little in theatre. We were a Quaker school with rather seventeenth- or eighteenth-century attitudes about the arts. We who studied music had to love music because we worked at it after hours. We had to go out and get what we wanted, and what we got was a kind of distillation of the artistic spirit."

Today music, drama, dance, studio arts, and photography are firm components of Swarthmore's curriculum. In the Department of Music, students can study performance in instrument or voice, as well as intensive offerings of music theory and composition, and the catalogue lists a full page of courses for credit in the dance. An undergraduate concentration in the theater features courses in techniques of acting, production, play analysis, scenic design, and directing, and the Department of Art offers courses in the cinema.

Although Swarthmore is a college celebrated for its reputation in the liberal rather than the performing arts, a substantial number of alumni work full-time in the field of entertainment. They are actors, singers, and dancers; they are also writers, directors, producers, designers, programming executives, promoters, TV and radio station managers, and technicians. What is show business like for Swarthmoreans? How have they survived its pitfalls and frustrations? How have they succeeded, or failed?

In an attempt to find out, the editors of the Bulletin solicited information from alumni engaged in the entertainment business across the country. The primary instrument of investigation was a questionnaire developed by Peter B. Bart '54, former film producer and president of Lorimar Film Corporation who has "moved on" to writing novels. Responses to the questionnaire, together with material from additional interviews, form the basis for this special issue.

These professionals, of course, being Swarthmoreans, did not provide simple, or expected, or unified answers. For a start, the term "field of entertainment," as used in the questionnaire to describe the various professions within the scope of the discussion, was not entirely acceptable to all who responded. Actor Stephen Lang '75 observed: "An assortment of those involved in the 'field of entertainment' would have to include TV newscasters, professional athletes, politicians and their spouses, weathermen, terrorists, convicts, lawyers, State Department spokesmen, vigilantes, evangelists, and daredevils as well as those of us involved in the more prosaic pursuits of acting, singing, and dancing."

Ellen Meyer DeMaria '49, a former stage designer, saw it a bit differently: "A Swarthmorean has to throw away the feeling that entertainment may be one of the lesser arts—evanescent and 'playing to the pit.' Not that it isn't, but who has ever been able to draw a line between entertainment and art? Certainly not Aristophanes, or Shakespeare, or Herrick, or Verdi, or Klee."

On the other hand, the term "show business,"—or, more colloquially, "show biz"—earned general acceptance.

While drama and the various theatrical arts have always been a part of campus life at Swarthmore, they did not infiltrate the curriculum until the late sixties. This distinction is manifest in the responses from alumni of different generations. More recent graduates credit the College with direct and specific encouragement from the classroom. In contrast, Peter Bart writes: "When I was at the College there was a tacit bias toward the academic world. Academic endeavor seemed 'serious,' while pursuits such as writing or directing or acting were deemed 'play.' Few opted for play."

Responses to the questionnaire include some exposition of the age-old conflict for the artist between the inner compulsion and his or her responsibilities—the need to create versus the need to make money. There is evidence of some squaring off into different corners—the performers against the commercial interests. Pure art versus high finance and low cunning.

While this hint of antagonism shows, there is basic understanding of the necessary symbiosis. Artists know their talents will be wasted without the aid of producers and promoters; entrepreneurs recognize that their essential function is to oil the wheels which make it possible for the artists to practice their crafts.

In show business, anything less than success is mere survival. In no other field of endeavor do we demand or expect excellence to the degree that we do from performing artists. A lawyer can be a good lawyer without being spectacular; doctors and politicians can be respected and revered, but the public never cries "What a brief!" "What an incision!" Yet we feel cheated if a dancer does not leave us breathless with astonishment, or an actor does not reduce us to tears.

This catharsis is the function of art, but we are merciless in demanding it. And not only of performers; we want dazzling sets, fabulous costumes, flawless orchestrations. Only the best is sufficient.

The following candid answers by some Swarthmoreans in show business touch on many topics, but the thread which unites all is the sense of doing, and being, one's best.

Why have relatively few Swarthmoreans gone into the entertainment business?

Ellen DeMaria says, "At the time I graduated, the values at Swarthmore were such that there was no place in the curriculum for the Arts. We theatrical types were considered to be a little frivolous, perhaps, a little irregular, and such unspoken values conveyed themselves to us."

The term "relatively few" bothered some respondents to the questionnaire. Stephen Lang noted that "Relatively few people from anywhere become artists," and dancer Joseph Kelly '71 wondered "So what does quantity mean, anyway?"

Kelly continued: "One has to be slightly reckless to be involved in a profession as capricious as arts entertainment. With the high incidence of intelligent, rational people among Swarthmoreans, the number of potential entertainers is automatically reduced. Composer/singer Alvin Carmines '58, former associate pastor of Judson Memorial Church, New York City, developed this idea further: "If you ask why few Swarthmoreans are artists, I think it is because of fear. We Swarthmoreans are frightened of anything not under our control. When I was at the College even the arts were viewed intellectually: The presumption was that everything must be dissected, diagnosed, and dealt with. Art is not like that. You can't dissect a painting or a symphony; if you do, you are left with the bare bones of the work, lacking the spirit which infuses it. We have to joyfully admit the artistic sensibility to our lives."

John Loven '70, actor, director, and a manager of the People's Light and Theatre Company in Chester County, Pennsylvania, provided a list of deterrents which makes one marvel that anyone ever does go into entertainment. "The road in isn't structured," says Loven. "The steps to becoming a doctor are established: Excel at each step, in order, and you are a doctor. The road up in show biz is utterly occult.

"Most of the apparent show biz aspirants you encounter at first are rather disastrous company to keep. It's hard to maintain your identity as a serious apprentice to a great craft among the flailing looneys.

"Making a living in show biz is just a bad bet.

"Family support for a career in the arts is rare.

"Students seldom get any glimpse of what the profession is like. Even in a very good acting class, neither the bad aspects nor the glory of the art can be shown. Among real pros, there is a pride and a sharing of discipline and respect that few ever know.

"There are stereotypes to overcome—such as that of the entertainer as wild spirit, or producer as gross huckster. These are not uniformly inaccurate, but they put off those whose self-image needs a maintenance level of popular respect."

Did your Swarthmore background help or hinder you?

"The high standards of the College are bound to rub off on any individual who goes through Swarthmore," says Peter Conway '51, summing up the majority of responses to this question.

"For my particular brand of television writing and producing, Swarthmore was invaluable," writes Christopher

SCHULBERG

The structure of the film industry systematically inhibits the production of movies which strive for more than profit, according to independent filmmaker Sandra Schulberg '72. She has chosen, therefore, to work outside the perimeters of this industry. "There are many obstacles to overcome in making independent feature films and, at this stage, financial sacrifices to make," Schulberg admits. "But there are priceless rewards, too: the reward of producing a fine film and seeing it projected in a public theater, of watching the theater as the film ends and the audience applauds spontaneously; the reward of knowing that those ungainly film cannisters containing the magic images that move people to laughter and tears are being shipped to and seen in scores of theaters and countries at the same time; and, not least, the satisfaction of outwitting the system."

Currently producing a new independent feature based on life in the iron range of northern Minnesota, Schulberg is, again, using fiction as a means of reporting on a distinctly American reality, a technique which she first learned in 1974 while working on the PBS drama series Visions.

"Before I went to work on Visions, I was convinced that news and documentary were the only means of reporting on the world. Producer Barbara Schultz persuaded me to consider the possibility that fiction offered the same opportunity."

After two years Schulberg left Visions to work as associate producer and casting director of the independent feature Alambrista, the story of a Mexican "illegal" migrant worker, which was shot in the fields, bars, and buses of Baja, southern California, and Arizona. Then, after working on several shorter films, in 1979 she collaborated in the launching of the Independent Feature Project, a New York-based organization established to create funding mechanisms that honor and protect the vision of the independent filmmaker.

Since that time, Schulberg has been involved in the domestic and foreign distribution of several independent features including Alambrista and Northern Lights, for which she helped raise production funds. "Although it left me completely exhausted and often frustrated, the distribution of Northern Lights was a thoroughly compelling and rewarding experience," Schulberg comments. Both Alambrista and Northern Lights have won Camera d'Or Awards at the Cannes Film Festival.

"The independent feature films I have worked on have all sought to touch your heart, your head, and your funny bone at the same time. They are made for a demanding audience. Surmounting the obstacles we face as independent filmmakers is well worth it. I would much rather wrestle with the tangible obstacles we face than struggle with the nebulous dynamics that frustrate our friends and colleagues within the industry. My part to a very large extent, whereas many of our friends and colleagues temporariously in Hollywood live like indentured servants, luxuriously kept, perhaps, but impotent."

"Independent feature filmmakers are only now getting to the point where they have the opportunity to prove that their films can reach wide audiences and thus be 'commercial.' In other countries, like France, England, Germany, and Australia, we would be receiving large subsidies. Here we have no such support. Especially in light of the Reagan cuts in funding for the arts and the humanities, we have no choice but to go to private and foreign sources. Ultimately, we must rely on the paying public to support us."

"Relatively experienced filmmakers will be able to make this transition, I think," Schulberg continues. "But there is a danger that the new generation will be drastically and tragically stunted. Unless some of us can produce privately-financed and financially successful films which can serve as models, I am afraid that the tremendous artistic gains we have made will be lost."

JAMES

After many hours and $4,000 spent in a recording studio making a demo tape, after flying to Los Angeles to peddle his musical wares, and after words of encouragement from three major recording studios, singer/pianist/songwriter Doug James '73 flew back east feeling hopeful.

Then came the waiting, the unanswered calls to L.A., the beginnings of disillusionment.

But one 110-degree sticky summer day in Manhattan, sweltering in a three-piece suit and weighed down by his 100-pound tape recorder, Doug arrived at Atlantic Records' office for an audition which changed his luck. The woman who listened to his demo tape asked him to replay one song, and replay it again. She assured him that he would have a hit within six months and arranged auditions and taping sessions which led to an offer for a contract with another major recording studio. And suddenly the calls to the West Coast were answered.

Several offers followed during the next year, but all seemed lopsided in favor of the recording companies or the agents. Fortunately, Doug recognized the potential pitfalls and put himself into the hands of New York lawyer Peter Thall, whose clients include Barry Manilow, Elton John, and The Cars. With negotiations underway, Doug continued to audition for managers and producers in the music industry and eventually signed with his present publisher, Love-Zager Productions.

Working with Love-Zager, Doug has now had several of his songs recorded by stars like Dionne Warwick, Cissy Houston, the Spinners, and Odyssey. Warwick's album containing Doug's hit "After You" has sold more than 500,000 copies, certifying it for a gold album.

Before gaining a firm foothold in the pop music business Doug spent six years earning his living as substitute teacher by day and a singer by night. When he wasn't teaching or performing, he somehow found time to write.

In spite of his new-found success, Doug still works non-stop. "I write songs all the time," he says. "I'm not sure if it's a curse or a blessing, but sometimes I wake up in the middle of the night with a melody in my mind, or stop an argument with my girlfriend to write down lyrics based on something she says.

"The competition is unbelievable in this business," Doug continues. "Being successful takes a lot of work and a lot of faith. But I'm doing what I want to do. There's no better feeling than hearing your song playing on the radio, or in a nightclub. I remember once when I was walking in a park and heard a guy singing one of my songs; I just walked along beside him for a while and smiled."

"Kit" Lukas '56. "Where else could I have learned how to research and write a program within seven days, or to have a broad enough interest in the world to produce a documentary on the Metropolitan Opera one week, Selective Service the next, and New Math the third? More directly, working with Professor Henry Gleitman, both in his "Learning and Thinking" seminar for psychology majors and as musical director of The Mikado, may not have had the glister of USC or BU's departments of film or theatre, but it taught me that innovation and invention were the sources of much valuable material, and it made me see that creativity in intellectual realms might be admirably turned into artistic creativity in others."

Independent film producer David Schickele '58: "My Swarthmore experience fed me in terms of my subsequent career in two ways: Normal liberal arts habits of curiosity and investigation have given me a thicker stew on which to sup; and Swarthmore gave me ample opportunity to experiment with all my showbiz talents, from acting to performing music to writing."

The inevitable comparison invited by this question pits a liberal arts education against the kind of technical training normally provided by the professional schools of performing arts. Singer Pamela Gore '67 found the distinction negligible: "I was able through Bond concerts and solo opportunities in chorus to gain important performance experience, a luxury which most undergraduates at music schools do not enjoy. In addition, the rigorous intellectual climate of Swarthmore taught me to find my own artistic solutions to musical problems."

Gore's sentiment is echoed, with variations, by actors Lang and Loven. Lang found that Swarthmore allowed him to focus on Shakespeare in depth, developing perceptions that continue to be useful in his work. "I still consult seminar papers, my own and others', when preparing for a Shakespearean role."

John Loven: "The skills forced upon me (by what I perceived then as wretchedly difficult academic chores) allow me to think, plan, and express myself much more effectively than those who sat around in black tights for four years being sensitive. At first it's nice to flaunt credentials from a recognized theatre school, but ultimately level-headed ability is the bottom line."

Forrest "Woody" Compton '49, who has played the part of D.A. Mike Karr on the soap opera The Edge of Night for the past ten years, says he can trace the roots of his theatrical career directly to Swarthmore. "I was a political science major, with plans to go on to law school. But Barbara Lange cast me in several College productions and arranged for me to work during the summer at the community theater at Buck Hill Falls. My theater work became the most gratifying part of my life at Swarthmore; I switched to a major in English and, forswearing the law, went on to Yale Drama School." Compton finds it delightfully ironic that he has been so long employed acting the part of a lawyer.

One should not, however, become too self-confident as the recipient of a first-rate B.A. Peter Bart writes: "I am grateful that I did not succumb to pressures of the period to go on to graduate work. Over-education can hinder as much as education can help. Experience ultimately becomes a better teacher than anything obtainable within the academic cocoon." And from Al Carmines: "To have a good hard-nosed education is helpful, but you must put your education into perspective. It's marvellous as background, but not as the spirit of art."

Ellen DeMaria reports that as an apprentice in New York, she habitually concealed her academic background. "Most people that I worked with were a little put off, or so it seemed to me, by the kind of rarified education we were lucky enough to get. Nevertheless, the excitement of ideas was there, the sense of unbounded possibilities, and that basic respect for the potential of the individual."

According to Don A. Mizell '71, general manager for radio station KJLH/FM in Los Angeles, "Swarthmore teaches you to use your imagination, to think. I never lost the vision or the passion which was engendered there. There's a subculture of ideas at the College which is distinct from the curriculum; it's a nest of experimentation. And what is show business, anyway? It's a form of packaging imagination."

Would you recommend entertainment to Swarthmoreans as a career?

Carmines: "If I have to recommend being an artist to you, you are not one."

Actor Mark Soper '77: "I would recommend a career in the performing arts only to my closest friends or my worst enemies."

Loven: "For most, entertainment is a vocation in the religious sense. I would never recommend it to anybody. Them as needs it, knows it."

Composer/musician J. Peter Schickele '57: "I wouldn't recommend the field of entertainment to anybody unless that's the only thing he or she can imagine doing."

This sense that the key ingredient must be an inner compulsion, a commitment of the soul, is balanced by practical suggestions from some of the other respondents.

Kit Lukas points out a comparison with other professions. "If one is of an artistic bent, it is perhaps moot to ask whether you should go into such a field as television or theatre or musical comedy; it would probably be just as unpleasant to stay out. But let's ask, rather, whether some of the values that Swarthmore teaches cannot be enjoyably struggled for within the entertainment industry. My answer would be 'of course.' But I emphasize the word 'struggle.'"

Peter Conway, a press agent/publicist/performer who is currently disenchanted with the field, believes that performers—actors, singers, dancers—would have a better chance if they attended a large university with a strong performing arts program. "However, for writers, producers, fund-raisers, and other non-performing members of the field, I should think that a Swarthmore education would be a decided asset."

A fairly rosy picture of prospects is painted by Peter Bart and by William C. Fitts III '53, senior producer of the Entertainment and Sports Programming Network. "There is considerable opportunity," says Bart. "There is a chance for substantial financial reward. There is a constant challenge—

JOLLES

Perched on a moving float, surrounded by costumed figure skaters, and dressed as a Grecian goddess, Susan Goodman Jolles '62 spent ten months touring America with Holiday on Ice. Eighteen years ago, this was her first job as a professional harpist.

"After four years at Swarthmore, I experienced culture shock working in an environment where most of my colleagues had never finished high school," Jolles recalls. "Wearing a wig that was so heavy that I could barely hold my head up, I was a fifteen-minute act in a show that was one notch above the circus. Our touring schedule was exhausting."

But it was during this tour, in a hotel room in Mississippi, that she received the phone call which was a turning point in her career. The call was an invitation to spend the summer at Tanglewood on a Fromm Fellowship. There she met professionals who became the connections needed to get a foot in the door of the musical world. There, too, she met her husband, Jerome Jolles, composer and teacher.

Now a free-lance harpist based in New York City, Susan thrives on the variety of her work. One day she may be taping a jingle for Aramis perfume while the next may find her in the pit performing with the New York City Opera. Currently she is devoting much of her energy to the Jubal Trio made up of a soprano, a flutist, and a harpist. The trio, winner of the 1977 Chamber Music Award of the Walter W. Naumberg Foundation, is now in the midst of preparing to participate in the festival of New York composers and is receiving support from the C. Michael Paul Chamber Music Residency. The trio's repertoire includes everything from Mozart to Gershwin.

Long and irregular hours, touring, and the mental strain of performing sometimes prevent Susan from spending time with her husband and their two teen-aged daughters, Renee and Annette, but she nonetheless puts a high priority on her family relationships. "Quality parenting must often substitute for quantity parenting. I recall one frantic period when the only time I could see my husband was during Acts II and III of an opera I was performing. Luckily, I played only Acts I and IV."

While maneuvering her harp into the back of the station wagon (after running around the corner to buy a leotard for one daughter before driving uptown to pick up a rehaired violin bow for the other daughter) following a morning taping session in Manhattan, Susan admits that she is happy with the field she has chosen. "In music, preparation begins very early in life. One cannot recommend this field: It must be the fulfillment of a desire from within. It's a demanding career, being a free-lance musician, but it has no drawbacks when one is happy."

indeed demand—for growth. Most of all, the entertainment business happens to be entertaining.” And from Fitts: “In sports production, we are faced with standards that are as high as those for other programs, but we have the added demands of working with all available production tools—live shows, videotape, and film. There are not many experts in sports television and, consequently, there is great opportunity for those who want to learn the field.”

Robert F. Lewine '34, president of the Academy of Television Arts and Sciences Foundation, uses a darker hue of paint. He would recommend the field to Swarthmoreans if they are “willing to knock on many, many doors which fail to open, and to accept an entry level position at relatively small pay with menial responsibilities; prepared to accept the insecurity which is endemic to a show business career; and determined to get into entertainment despite the discouragements which confront them for weeks, months, years.”

What are the drawbacks?

Most responses to this question were brief, and most stressed financial and professional insecurity. Pamela Gore noted the need to supplement her work as an entertainer with teaching, and pointed out that having an income from many different sources can affect one's credit rating. Carmelita DiMichael '71, a director, choreographer, and teacher specializing in children's theater, cited “stiff competition and no guarantees” as drawbacks.

Bill Fitts spoke of the physical strain: “Working in sports television is mentally and physically exhausting. It's like walking in New York City.” Peter Conway blamed “too few jobs, and too many qualified people eager to fill them,” while Don Mizell rapped out a staccato list: “Fickleness. Crassness. Weird hours. Pressures. No respect for intellectuals. ‘Star’ egos.”

Others took a hard look at the battering suffered by their own egos. Al Carmines finds that the drawbacks consist of “pain, suffering, exploring the painful parts of yourself, revealing yourself to others.” Mark Soper sees “no security, emotional or financial. No reward for entirely too much effort and then, if you're astronomically fortunate, too much reward for too little effort.” Peter Schickele cites “unsteady people on both sides of the footlights. A probably unhealthy but virtually unavoidable dependence on what a lot of people you don't know think of you.”

“Rejection is a way of life,” says Stephen Lang, noting continuous 80 percent unemployment among professional actors. Also, “the frustration of no one seeming to want what you are so anxious to give. And the occasional feeling that you are making either no contribution to society, or a frivolous contribution to an elite.”

The best remedy for insecurity, according to Woody Compton, is to “develop a thick skin and be persistent.” He mourns the need for actors, dancers, and musicians (“the most fragile, the most sensitive category of theatrical people”) to grow the toughest hides.

A particular pang for Kit Lukas is that success in the industry is so visible. “Here, one sees Coppola, whose Black Stallion has to be one of the rare collisions of art and financial success; there, one sees Joseph Papp of New York's Shakespeare Festival and Public Theatre. He did it, why can't I? The public acclaim for the few who have made it, the public ignorance of many who struggle, are hard to bear.”

Kelly

Joe Kelly '71 spends much of his time in the spotlight, doing everything from classic modern dance to vaudeville hoofing. Over the past ten years, he has become known to audiences in the Southeast as the artistic director of the Atlanta Contemporary Dance Company, with which he toured and performed throughout the country. But after a decade of rehearsals and performances with this group—culminating in an outdoor concert in Atlanta's Piedmont Park attended by over 15,000 people—he left ACDC to try something new, a one-man company.

In one program, "Rogues Gallery," performed in Atlanta this past winter, Kelly combined many forms of dance with acting. "This is something I had been thinking about doing, but I never had the time or the proper forum. The one-man show gives me the freedom to experiment with this combination, to celebrate different aspects of the American experience."

In "Rogues Gallery," Kelly changes hats, shoes, and characters frequently, beginning with a tap routine, progressing through some loose "leg dancing" of the Lindy Hop variety, moving into a couple of modern dance selections, and finally spinning through a disco sequence. Next he turns into Huck, an aging vaudeville performer, who gives the audience an insight into early vaudeville days. The show also includes several readings from Samuel Beckett illustrating the frightening futility of life, followed by a dramatic change in pace—a tap number called "Top Hat," featuring Kelly in top hat and tails.

Kelly enjoys variety in the characters he portrays and in the audiences he attracts. And he is inspired by the challenge of recreating a mood all alone night after night. "It was actually less nervewracking to do a one-man show, because I was handling everything. I didn't have to worry about anyone else."

His interest in becoming a performer who sings, acts, and dances is related to his fascination with vaudeville. "In the early 1900s, vaudeville was the foremost entertainment medium of the time. Just as television attracts some brilliant actors, vaudeville attracted talented performers who were forced to respond to commercial pressures to succeed in the business. In both cases you find creative people working in noncreative modes of expression, and their creativity shines through."

After "Rogues Gallery," he performed with three colleagues in a dance revue entitled "Remember That?," another medley designed for nightclub/cabaret audiences.

"For me, it's important to keep doing things I like," Kelly comments.

"As a performer, you must keep learning and challenging yourself even if it means outgrowing your audience. If you don't, they'll outgrow you."

"It has taken me twelve years to live comfortably with a comment from Hubert Selby [Last Exit to Brooklyn] to the effect that art doesn't ask much, just everything you've got. I am reminded of those words constantly. Everything takes second place to my work. I don't seem to be able to do it any other way."

All sectors of show business, according to Peter Bart, are like exclusive clubs that profess to want no new members. "But once you're in the door, you also have the 'roller coaster' syndrome to cope with: You have wonderful ups and terrifying downs—the trick is to find your own equilibrium."

Of all who responded, only harpist Susan Goodman Jolles '62 seems to have found that equilibrium: "There are no drawbacks when one is happy."

Has the entertainment industry become so commercialized that one's own personal artistic inclination or "statement" is inevitably lost in the shuffle?

This is a fulcrum question, and answers to it covered a lot of territory. But whether the respondents agreed or disagreed with the premise, it evoked some of their strongest emotions.

From Pamela Gore: "Being well paid to do a job does not discredit one. Everything I sing has my thoughts and experience as a musician and as a person, as well as my own vocal timbre, welded into it. The qualities I bring to the music as well as the way in which I execute it are my artistic 'statement.'"

Another singer, Peter Conway, sees it differently: "Managers and agents these days seem to be interested only in the fast buck and couldn't care less about a performer's quality so long as he or she has a built-in 'following' to guarantee a sold-out house. I wish I had a dollar—even a nickel!—for every time I've been told, 'What you do is great, but it just isn't commercial, it won't sell.'"

"One's personal statement, artistic or otherwise, is always in danger of being lost," according to Al Carmines. "That is where one's training at Swarthmore becomes important: Contempt for the commercial was best learned there." Peter Schickele sees no consistent correlation, either positive or negative, between worth and remuneration. There are certainly people who deserve to be better known than they are, but, in his view, it is also true that many of the people who are well-known deserve to be.

"Let's face it: To eat you have to sell," writes Joe Kelly. "A part of you is going to get lost in the shuffle. The game is about how much gets lost." With elegant simplicity, Carmelita DiMichael suggests "If you want to make a statement, do. I think it's hard not to."

Pragmatic advice for the performer is given by Steve Lang. "It pays to be discriminating, but this can be difficult, given the scarcity of employment. However, experience is the most vital thing for a young actor. The on-camera techniques he or she learns to sell dog food on a TV commercial will pay artistic dividends when the role of Romeo or St. Joan comes along."

Tackling the question from a slightly different perspective, John Loven zeroes in on the word "personal." As soon as there is more than one artist at work in an interactive environment (before a live audience, for instance), Loven notes that there must be a "melding of individual 'statements' into a group expression. The actor must find his ecstasy there."

Robert Lewine provides a hard-headed look at management's view of the entertainment business. "Yes, the entertainment industry is highly commercialized—it's a business, no different from that of manufacturing automobiles. The business must make a profit—period. I hated Gilligan's Island but it rates high and has done so for almost sixteen years because it suits the masses (that is not said disparagingly, either). Paper Chase was cerebral, excellently written and performed, but it didn't attract a large enough audience. And that's the name of the game: numbers, high numbers. The Edsel car was a statement supported by an enormous advertising and public relations effort. But the public didn't like it. That made it an expensive mistake."

"Every facet of our economy," writes Peter Bart, "seems enshadowed by megabucks, and that's true of show biz as well. When I started in the movie industry the typical film cost $2.5 million to produce. Now it costs $10 million to produce and another $6 million to market and distribute. So it becomes a lot harder to take artistic risks. That's one reason I've moved on to writing novels. Yet, there is always the grand exception. Individual will still cracks corporate will from time to time if for no other reason than that the passion is greater."

Why restrict the moral question to the entertainment industry, Kit Lukas asks. "Isn't it true that the academic world is so computerized, so dependent upon federal grants, so chopped up into competing elements that a teacher can't make an impact upon students? Isn't it true that the business world is so competitive that you have to give in to the pressures and forego standards, go for the big bucks, and forget about ethics or consumer rights?"

"But statements are being made every day," continues Lukas, "and receiving some kind of reception from some audience somewhere. It's both self-defeating and infantile to give up because one wants to change the whole world with one's work, and the world isn't interested. It's also very true that it's not easy to fight the money-grubbing industry with good creations. It's frustrating. It's not 'nice.' So—welcome to the real world, but don't let the industry degenerate into something run by people who have no statements to make."

Is it worthwhile being an "artistic success" but not having enough to eat?

Peter Schickele: "If it is, yes; if it isn't, no."

Don Mizell: "If that's what you're into."

On the whole, hunger is definitely passé. "I prefer eating," writes Lewine. Joe Kelly believes that finding a way to put bread in your mouth without destroying or severely limiting yourself is the number one task. "I don't think that anyone who is 'starving' is doing himself or his art any service."

For Susan Jolles, the question raises an unfortunate aspect of the arts—that artists cannot survive on their work alone. "Artists are just as professional as doctors, lawyers, or engineers. No layman would question paying for their services. And artists do have to pay the rent, feed, clothe, and educate their children, just like the rest of society."

"I wonder if 'having enough to eat' isn't really a euphemism for wanting to be very rich and having too much to eat," writes Kit Lukas. "Does anyone really know any artist who is starving because he's artistically successful? We really don't need to be the head of a television company or have an SRO show on Broadway in order to achieve some satisfaction from our artistic work. And it's really possible to have a modicum of success, even if you're not 'box office.'"

The newly-recorded song is "Get on Down to the Music," the group performing it is Colors, and the lead singer is Vaneese Thomas '74. If it's a hit, a lot of people (producers, musicians, backers, and the recording company) will be very happy and Vaneese will have taken one giant step along the road to success.

The road, for Vaneese, has had some detours. After graduating from Swarthmore, she taught French, social studies, and music at Moorestown Friends School in New Jersey for two years. Then, taking a deep breath, she quit her job and took up singing full-time. "In terms of eating, it was a mistake. In terms of what eventually happened to me, it was the best thing I've done," she says. For a time she sang with Driftsilver, a group which originated at the College; two of her colleagues were Jim Kelly '76 and Carolyn Mitchell '74. "We met a lot of people in those days," says Vaneese, "and made a lot of contacts. When Driftsilver broke up, Carolyn and I went on to work as background vocalists." Their first contract was with one of the biggest recording companies in the business, Polydor, and Carolyn and Vaneese sang behind such top artists as Al Martino, Arthur Prysock, and Joey Travolta.

Then progress slowed; according to Vaneese, "Things were just not getting off the ground." In 1976 she married David A. White '77, a graduate of Georgetown University who is a manager of information systems for Federal Express in Memphis. This means that Vaneese has to commute to singing and recording engagements in New York. "My kind of work is disruptive of family life," says Vaneese, "but I think it is easier for us because we have no children. David and I are young in our careers, and each of us is supportive of what the other is trying to do." "I'm in this business to stay," she continues. "I know now that anything else for me is only an avocation. It took me a long time to decide that this is it, but this is it." Her father, Rufus Thomas, has been a professional singer and performer for forty years, and her sister Carla is a professional singer as well. "I knew the problems of the life from my own family, and I had decided against it when I went to Swarthmore. But, oddly enough, it was Swarthmore that changed my mind." Shy about singing in public, Vaneese used to go to Tarble to play ("I couldn't stay away from a piano!") and sing to herself behind closed partitions. Opening the partitions, she used to find a crowd gathered on the other side, just listening. "I began to realize that I could affect people with my voice; it took me that long to sense my own gift. And knowing you've got talent is a vital part of being an artist." Having talent is, however, not always enough. "In the recording business," says Vaneese, "you cannot control the factors leading to success. If you have a bad agent, or bad promotion, or if you have a good agent and good promotion, your career is still largely beyond your control. You are in the hands of the recording company." Vaneese, now under contract to Becket Records, a subsidiary of Buddah Records, is hopeful. "It's been rough at times, and some of the knocks have been hard, but each time I try it gets a little better, and each time I learn more." Some artists, says Vaneese, will get so hungry they'll grab at anything and make mistakes—such as signing a contract without looking at it properly, or giving away their publishing rights. "I'm not that hungry any more," she asserts, "and besides, I've learned you don't have to give anything away to get what is best for yourself. Remember, you are the product the producers want." And she hopes that "Get on Down to the Music" will be what the public wants.

COLORS

Are the demands of a career in entertainment especially troublesome for personal and family relationships?

"Only," says Peter Bart, "if one classifies divorce, depression, and deprivation as 'troublesome.'" Here again a seeming jest reveals painful truth. For the artists, it is long irregular hours, touring, the mental strain of performing; for the producers, directors, and managers, it is the crises which become routine, the merciless demands of tight scheduling, the anguish of raising funds; all of these tend to make traditional home life impossible. In this area, more than any other, flexibility is imperative.

Peter Schickele finds touring particularly hard on family life. "My wife and I feel lucky that the amount of touring I do has more or less grown with our children. When they were 1 and 3 years old, I was on the road only a few weeks out of the year, as opposed to the five months I currently spend on tour. Even then it wasn't easy, and my younger child was especially angry about my absence. As soon as each kid got to be 7, I started taking them, separately, with me for a few days each season. Not only is it a tremendous treat for them, but it also gives them a concrete idea of what I'm actually doing out there."

Robert Lewine sees the solution to the problem as a matter of "pacing, of balance, of resisting any attempt at martyrdom. If one is fearful that work in the entertainment industry will make serious inroads on personal relationships or family, I'd strongly recommend that he or she settle for a 9-to-5 career and enjoy the relationships."

While balancing any career with any personal relationship is difficult, Pamela Gore believes that it is more so when the artist/entertainer is starting out. "An artist often feels at the beginning of his or her career that getting ahead is so difficult that every spare minute must be spent in rehearsal, practicing, or at a performance. The needs of conductors and colleagues are often put ahead of those of family members. I'd say such thoughtless behavior is more a function of youth than something peculiar to the world of entertainment."

Peter Conway considers relationships within the field more feasible, "primarily because the other person is more understanding of the demands a career can make on an individual and on a relationship." Reversing the majority of these theories, Don Mizell believes that a hectic life in show business is possible only if one has stability and solidity in a personal relationship or family life. And Al Carmines does not acknowledge a true rift: "Perhaps the artist knows more about genuine giving than the engineer. Traditional notions of family relationships are sometimes strained, but all traditions should be strained and tested."

For some, the choices are unequivocal. Joe Kelly: "Everything takes second place to my work. I don't seem to be able to do it any other way. I've paid for it, but I can't help it." Ellen DeMaria: "I quit the theatre after having two children. You have to be more successful financially than I was to have two acute priorities in one life. It is not often that one character combines theatricality and traditionalism. The element of surprise, unpredictability, is essential in theatre, and depends on a certain nonconformism, or at least a treasured uniqueness. But oh, how the gentle predictability of a traditional life calls to theatrical people! The wink of the wedding ring, cows chewing in the meadow, things measured and thoughtful, serene. How they all long for it!"

What's the best way to prepare?

No equivocation here. Advice from all was clearcut and emphatic: Study, work, take classes, learn the basics of your trade; learn the craft before you call it an art. "Work hard, be patient, and go for it," admonishes Don Mizell. "Learn the basics of business and audience appeal. Learn about your particular industry, and learn a particular skill in it." It is wise to be the very best you can be, because competition is heavy. "I've been giving courses at UCLA and USC for two years," says Robert Lewine. "I teach an aggregate of eighty-five students each term. They all mean to get into the television industry. If you multiply this number by 100 for each college or university which has broadcasting courses, you can readily see how competitive the job market is today."

Modest hopes and lowered expectations would seem to be essentials for aspiring entertainers. "Be aware," says Kit Lukas, "that while many will achieve success, most will not. Be aware that the 'real world' is a combination of surprises that no college can prepare you for. Be aware that talents like good writing, good thinking, and social graces can be of real benefit some times; at other times, boors with lousy taste capture the brass ring!" Ellen DeMaria: "Get work. Fail at it. Learn to do it better. It takes constant exercise, and that's difficult to arrive at. But these days there are a million small theatres, rock groups, and theatre clubs, where you can get a lot of experience in a small arena. It takes a shrunken stomach, huge ambition married to small expectation, and a willingness to work."

Making contacts, whenever and wherever you can, is highly recommended. "I'm not talking about super-duper wheeling and dealing," says Peter Schickele. "Teachers, fellow students, many people can be of great value in establishing contacts. Anyone who sees or hears your work and likes it might be in a position to do something about it." Accept jobs, no matter how humble, advises Peter Bart: "Use your summers intelligently—deliver coffee in a summer theatre, serve as a copy boy at a newspaper, work in the mail room at a talent agency. It all provides insights into your chosen field."

Finally, indispensably, "Find the best teachers," says Joe Kelly. "They're never where they say they are. You have to look (and they're often crazy, or outcasts). Never follow the crowd. Never seek to emulate anything that's popular. You want to be popular yourself, but imitations are walking death. The popular taste can seduce, but is ultimately mindless and sterile. Satisfy yourself."

Once in, how do you stay in?

"The same way you got in, only different." The flip tone of Mark Soper's answer to this question masks its seriousness. All alumni who answered this question concur that a life in the world of the arts involves a constant re-establishment of one's credentials. "An actor stays in the theatre by continuing to prepare for the theatre," observes Steve Lang.

Advise for staying in show business duplicated much of that which was offered for getting in: Maintain standards, be flexible, don't let yourself grow stale, take every job that comes along, don't be proud. Kit Lukas recommends "Perseverance, sneakiness, willingness to bend as far as principles allow (and sometimes further), keeping up with changes in your profession, a rich aunt."

"It is important for an actor to get into the marketplace as soon as possible," advises Woody Compton. "My first fifteen years in the business were murder, and success didn't come until I was over 40. There is a real premium on youth, especially today. I didn't get rolling until I was 26 or so, which was a little late to get a toehold." Compton notes that there are very few remaining resident summer stock companies, which were the traditional training grounds when he was younger. But their place has been taken by the daytime TV serials. "I've watched actors and actresses with very little experience or talent develop in as little as six months into acceptable performers. Daytime TV may develop some bad habits, but it can sure speed up an apprenticeship."

Crisp and blunt as always, Don Mizell offers a maxim applicable to any job: "Generate dollars and don't cause problems."

"The obvious answer to this question," notes Robert Lewine, "is to keep your nose clean and your record reasonably successful, your eyes open at all times, and your tastes general rather than specific or elite." He continues, comparing the entertainment arena to a war zone: "Cooks and technicians retire and collect a pension; that's not true of the infantrymen on the front lines. They have a tendency to get shot first."

"To be successful in the theater world, you must be prepared for the long haul and believe with all your heart that cream rises," says actor Stephen Lang '75.

"Even most overnight sensations have toiled for years off-off-Broadway and regionally honing their craft and staying prepared for that possible 'lucky break,'" he continues. "You need a combination of talent and luck."

It appears that Lang has both, for in the six years he has been in the business, he has played a wide variety of roles on, off-, and off-off-Broadway, for television, and for film. He enjoys the diversity of the roles—from a clown in The Winter's Tale to Nijinsky in Clown-maker to Cockney Bill Walker in Major Barbara—but regrets being classified as an amorphous actor rather than as a leading man or a character actor.

There are several classical roles Lang hopes to play in the future, like Peer Gynt and Hamlet. Meanwhile, he auditions for all types of roles as frequently as possible. Although he studied acting at Swarthmore and audits acting courses in New York, he finds that he learns more through practical experience.

"Experience is the most vital thing for a young actor," he stresses. "And an actor's statement is something that takes years to make; it involves a substantial body of work. It pays to be discriminating and not act in something you don't believe in. This can be difficult, given the scarcity of employment in this field.

"I do strive for fame, even though I still love acting without it, so that I can have more control over the roles I play. Also, now that my wife, Tina, and I have a five-month-old baby, I find that financial considerations are becoming more important. I can't just concentrate on my artistic pursuits as I used to.

"I began acting seriously when I was in high school and continued at Swarthmore where I directed, acted, wrote, produced, stage-managed, designed sets and costumes, and hung lights. Swarthmore did not formally train me to do these jobs but they had to be done, so I did them. The extra-curricular nature of the theatre at Swarthmore was a healthy state of the art.

"Anyone who is not hell-bent on being in theater should stay out of it," Lang advises. "As a rule, the financial rewards are negligible, and accepting rejection becomes a way of life. In addition, you are faced with the frequent frustration that nobody seems to want what you are so anxious to give. We have a crazy system in this country—as an actor, you are either a bum or a star."

LEWINE

A career in the entertainment industry is, at best, insecure," says Robert F. Lewine '34, president of the Academy of Television Arts and Sciences Foundation. "To regard it as frivolous is a mistake. It requires much good luck, much hard work, and a willingness to contend with many disappointments."

During his thirty-six-year career in the television industry, Lewine has become a maverick in his field. He has had the unusual good fortune to be an officer of all three major networks—ABC, NBC, and CBS. After serving each network as vice-president in charge of all programs, he moved to Warner Brothers, where he worked as vice-president in charge of all television activity.

"I can say without qualification that my career in television has been rewarding, fun, demanding, challenging, difficult, disheartening at times, and exhilarating at other times.

It was also pressurized, breathtaking, almost suicidal; and it's something to stay far away from if one isn't prepared to accept all of this—and more."

Lewine's dedication to his work is combined with an uncompromising desire to do well regardless of the odds. "I happen to believe that talents will ultimately be recognized; the question is how long can one wait until they are. There's a strong tendency to give up. Sometimes it's simply a matter of survival that makes one quit ahead of time. The woods are full of 'artists' who insisted on recognition for their works, who refused to compromise, who had single vision (and I don't mean TELEvision) about what they believed to be worthwhile. I admire them but I chose to be successful—and I don't mean that I pandered. I never had any artistic ambitions which couldn't be bent if bending was the difference between starving and living a normal life.

In this 1959 photograph, Robert Lewine presents an Emmy Award to David Sarnoff (founder of RCA) in the Hotel Astor ballroom.

"Any commodity being produced for mass public acceptance becomes commercialized, although this is less true of legitimate theater and of classical music. If one's artistic inclination or statement isn't popular with the public then one may just as well rent a loft in Soho, finger paint, starve a little, and claim to be misunderstood. With that attitude, chances of surviving in the industry are, at best, minimal."

But, Lewine stresses, even when an artist manages to appeal to the mass public, and even when this happens repeatedly, he or she is still not immune to the major drawback in show business— insecurity. "There's an old saying in show business: 'You're only as good as your last picture.' A series of failures can be fatal, and even the most successful producers, directors, performers, writers et al can make a wrong choice. Not until your work is made available to the viewing public does the final evaluation take place—a 'hit' or 'miss.' To succeed in this industry, you must be prepared to accept the insecurity which is endemic to a show business career."

SHOW BIZ

A sampling of Swarthmoreans behind the footlights and behind the scenes.

Mark J. Soper '77 is an actor whose performances include stage, film, and television productions. Working with the Circle Repertory Company, he acted in Lulu and Feedlot. He recently played a role in the soap opera One Life to Live, and in several television specials including Parole, yet to be aired. In addition, he has roles in two feature films soon to be released, The World According to Garp and The Tempest.

Peter B. Bart '54 set out to be a journalist, armed with a B.A. in political science from Swarthmore and some solid studies at the London School of Economics. He spent four years as a general reporter for the Wall Street Journal and eight years at the New York Times, first as a local reporter and later covering the West Coast. He left the Times in 1965 to work for Paramount Pictures, where he became vice-president of production at a time when the studio was putting out blockbusters like Love Story and The Godfather. In 1971 Bart wrote the screenplay for Making It, produced by 20th Century-Fox. He produced two feature films of his own, Islands in the Stream and Fun with Dick and Jane. In 1978, Bart became president of Lorimar Film Corporation, a leading independent producer of films and television shows. In 1980, having "sort of O.D.'ed on movies," he took time off to write a novel, Destinies, published by Simon and Schuster. This was followed in 1981 by a second novel, Thy Kingdom Come, published by the Linden Press (a division of Simon and Schuster).

Carmelita A. DiMichael '71 is currently directing children's theatre productions. This summer she ran several performing arts camps for children. Year round, she teaches bodywork to individual clients using yoga, stress reduction, and the Alexander technique of movement. She also teaches dance to children. She studied acting, voice, and dance at the Herbert Berghof Studio in New York and earned a master's degree in children's theatre and movement from the University of Minnesota after graduating from Swarthmore with a degree in psychology.

David G. Schickele '58 has been working as an independent film producer since 1963, before which he spent two years teaching at the University of Nigeria as a member of the first group of Peace Corps overseas volunteers. His work includes many documentaries and feature films. He recently returned from the Sundance Institute in Utah. The Institute, founded by Robert Redford and Stuart Van Wengen, encourages the work of independent producers who are in danger of being trampled by the studio system. At Sundance, Schickele wrote the script for St. Elmo's Fire, a feature-length film he hopes to produce next year.

Christopher M. Lukas '56 went on from Swarthmore to graduate studies in psychology at Berkeley, but abandoned them in favor of work in the film/television industry, where he has been involved ever since. He has produced, written, directed, and supervised productions for commercial and public television for almost twenty-five years, winning his share of Emmys and other awards, including the Peabody Award and the Ohio State Award. This September he became a full-time academic, teaching film and video in the theater department of City College of New York.

Douglas T. James '73 is a pianist/singer/songwriter currently working for Love-Zager Productions. Several of his songs have been recorded by such famous artists as Dionne Warwick, Cissy Houston, Ronnie Dyson, the Spinners, and Odyssey. The latest Dionne Warwick album, containing James's hit "After You," has sold more than 500,000 copies, certifying it as a gold album. James, well-known as a performer in nightclubs and piano bars in the Wilmington-Philadelphia area, has recently moved to New York City.

Peter Schickele '57, Hon. '80 was the College's only music major when he graduated in 1957. Not long afterward, he created P.D.Q. Bach, the composer of now-familiar classics including the "Canine Cantata: Wacht Arf!" and the "Dona Nobis Pasta," scored for bargain-counter tenor and basso botto. Schickele composed the scores for the films The Crazy Quilt, Funny Man, and Silent Running, and wrote the music and lyrics for the Broadway hit Oh! Calcutta. He has worked as an arranger for Joan Baez, established himself as a composer of serious music, taught at Aspen Music Festival, at Swarthmore in 1961-62, and at Juilliard, where he received a master of science degree in music.

Ellen Meyer DeMaria '49 worked for more than ten years as an apprentice and later as a stage designer in New York. From 1950-55 she worked for the Metropolitan Opera Company, during which time she designed scenery for Manon, Die Meistersinger, and Othello. In London, she worked as a free-lance stage designer from 1955-60 designing sets for the Shakespeare Memorial Theatre at Stratford-on-Avon and for Sam Wanamaker's repertory theater in Liverpool, among others. She left her career in theatre to raise her two children. Since 1970, she has co-edited The Mediterranean Review, been the editorial columnist for The Suffolk Times, and published free-lance book reviews in the Nation, the Washington Post, and other publications.

Vaneese Thomas '74 (right) is shown here with classmate and former colleague Carolyn Mitchell '74. After graduating with a major in French, she started singing full-time with a Swarthmore spin-off group, Driftsilver, then moved on to work as a background vocalist under her first recording contract with Polydor Records. She joined the Colors group as lead singer last year and commutes to singing and recording engagements in New York City from her home in Memphis.

Sandra Schulberg '72 is an independent filmmaker who is currently producing Red Ghosts of Mesabi. She is a partner and vice-president of New Front Films, Inc., a foreign sales representative for many independent feature films, and a founder of The Independent Feature Project. She was associate producer of Northern Lights and Alambriata, before which she worked on the PBS drama series Visions.

William C. Fitts III '53, a two-time Emmy Award winner, is the senior producer of ESPN, the Entertainment and Sports Programming Network, a 24-hour programming service feeding cable systems. Fitts's twenty-two years of television broadcasting experience include thirteen years with CBS, three at NBC-TV, and six with WCAU-TV in Philadelphia. As executive producer at CBS, his credits include creation and production of The NFL Today and Countdown to Kickoff. At NBC, Fitts was producer of Grandstand, among other shows.

Stephen Lang '75 is an actor who has performed on, off-, and off-off-Broadway as well as regionally in over two dozen plays, including The Pretenders and Emigres at Tyrone Guthrie Theater, Major Barbara at McCarter Theater, Curse of the Starving Class at Buffalo Studio Arena, and The Winter's Tale at BAM Theater Company at the Brooklyn Academy of Music. He has worked also at the Folger and Hedgerow Theatres. Recently he has become active in film and television productions including a pilot for CBS aired in April, and King of America and Anyone for Tennyson? for the Public Broadcasting System. While at Swarthmore, he produced and directed two Hamburg shows.

Mizell has been a contributing editor to Black Creation magazine and a columnist for Soul & Jazz magazine. In 1974, he was a fellow of the Aspen Institute. Before joining KJLH, he served as director of product management for A & M / Horizon (producers of jazz and progressive music), and general manager for the black music and jazz/fusion division of Elektra / Asylum Records in Los Angeles.

Joseph L. Kelly '71, a dancer, spent ten years working as the artistic director of the Atlanta Contemporary Dance Company. His first theatrical performance was as a flower girl in a Dad's Club production of The Womanless Wedding when he was seven years old. Many productions later he began his formal dance training at Swarthmore, continuing in New York under Daniel Nagrin and Don Oscar Becque. This past winter, after leaving the Atlanta company, he presented a one-man show, "Rogues Gallery," and a cabaret nightclub show, "Remember That?," in Atlanta.

John W. Loven '70 has been active in all phases of theatrical work including writing and producing documentary films, playing hillbillies in radio commercials, and stage managing at Carnegie Hall. He won the "Best of Festival" award at the NYC Theater Directing Festival in 1975; since 1976 he has been an actor, director, teacher, and fundraiser with the People's Light and Theater Company, a professional repertory company in Malvern, Pa.

Last spring, Loven served as acting director of Theater at Haverford and Bryn Mawr Colleges; this fall he is teaching Introduction to Acting as a lecturer in the Department of English Literature at the College. Loven's most recent commercial efforts have been in the field of industrial communications: Last summer he wrote and produced a multi-image show for an interior design corporation which involved three slide projectors, a 16-mm film projector, and a computer programmed to operate all four at once.

Susan Goodman Jolles '62, a free-lance harpist, is affiliated with the New York City Opera, the American Composers Orchestra, the Contemporary Chamber Ensemble, and the Group for Contemporary Music. A founding member of the Jubal Trio, she also teaches privately and performs with other groups in New York City.

Alvin A. Carmines, Jr., '58: After twenty years with the Judson Memorial Church (Baptist/United Church of Christ) in Manhattan, the Rev. Al Carmines has just launched himself on a new career as a cabaret and nightclub singer. He plans to devote three years to the theatre and then possibly return to the ministry.

Graduating with High Honors in English Literature, Carmines went on to study at Union Theological Seminary.

As director of the experimental and influential Judson Poets' Theater, Carmines wrote the book, music, and/or lyrics for more than fifty musicals and oratorios, celebrating such varied topics as Abraham Lincoln, the 50s, New York, and the Burr-Hamilton duel. In 1978, after suffering an aneurysm, he wrote a musical play entitled In Praise of Death which included a buoyant pastiche of marches, ragtime, ballads, operatic duets, and hymns that typify a Carmines work.

For his many accomplishments in music and drama, Carmines was awarded the coveted off-Broadway Obie "for lifetime achievement." His most recent project is a musical, W.C., based on the life of W. C. Fields.

Robert F. Lewine '34, president of the Academy of Television Arts and Sciences Foundation, has served as a vice-president of programming for all three major networks. His background in television includes experience in commercial production, program research, advertising, and program production. In the mid-sixties, he was the vice-president for television at Warner Brothers. A charter member of the Academy, he has been closely involved in the continuous development, appraisal, and refinement of the Emmy Award. He founded Television Quarterly, and has played a key role in the development of the Academy archival library located at UCLA where he teaches television. He also teaches at the University of Southern California. In addition, he is chairman of the Riverside Broadcasting Company, recipient of an honorary degree from Columbia College in Los Angeles, a governor of the Academy of Television Arts and Sciences, and a member of the Academy's International Council.

Peter Conway '51 earns his living as a press agent/publicist for the arts, specifically in the fields of classical music and dance. During his career he worked as press director for Carnegie Hall, and as a publicist for Dennis Wayne's Dancers, a ballet company financed in part by Joanne Woodward. He recently worked with Alix Williamson, publicist for André Watts; the Juilliard String Quartet; and Alicia de La Rocha, among others. He has simultaneously pursued a free-lance career as a jazz singer, and his performances have taken him from Florida to New York to Nantucket.

Pamela W. Gore '67, left, received her master of music degree from the New England Conservatory of Music in Boston and remained in New England, where she has become a leading alto soloist. She has sung frequently with the Boston Symphony Orchestra and The Handel and Haydn Society; in New York, she has appeared at Carnegie Hall, Alice Tully

Hall, and Lincoln Center. In addition, she has performed at the Kennedy Center in Washington, D.C., and sung radio recitals for WGBH-FM (Boston), WQXR (New York), National Public Radio, and the BBC in Wales. A voice teacher at Mount Holyoke College, she has been alto soloist for ten years at King's Chapel in Boston.

Forrest S. Compton '49: For the past ten years, "Woody" Compton has been a regular performer on the long-running soap opera The Edge of Night. Although the cast rehearses and tapes the program fifty-two weeks out of the year, Compton finds (or makes) time to work in summer stock and off-Broadway productions whenever possible, appearing most recently in Sleuth and Sandcastles.

After earning an M.F.A. from Yale Drama School, Compton spent five years in New York doing all kinds of jobs from market research (street surveys) to clerking in the Post Office. His earliest employment in television was on live programs, which he found "more exciting and more fun" than the present taped shows. In 1957 he moved on to Hollywood where he remained until 1971, working primarily on nighttime TV in such programs as Hogan's Heroes, the FBI, The Fugitive, and That Girl, but also in feature films. He was a regular performer in the cast of Gomer Pyle, USMC for five years.

THE COLLEGE

Commencement 1981:

“You may be sure that in a wild, disorienting world, Swarthmore will always be there.”

Dappled light and flashbulbs danced on the 299 graduating seniors during Swarthmore's 109th commencement held on June 1 in the Scott Outdoor Auditorium. Surrounded by rhododendron, tulip trees, family, faculty, and friends, the graduates listened to charges from President Friend and four honorary degree recipients before walking on stage to receive their diplomas.

“We have done what we can to help you become more valuable in some intrinsic sense, and more useful socially,” the president said. “We let you go reluctantly because we have grown to like your company. But we see you go with pride, because we have done our best, and we believe you have done your best. You may be sure that in a wild, disorienting world, Swarthmore will always be there.”

For the seventh consecutive year, the president noted, the number of students graduating with honors increased. Of the 281 bachelor of arts degrees and the twenty-three bachelor of science in engineering degrees conferred, 28 percent were awarded with honors and another 11 percent were awarded with distinction in course. More than two dozen fellowships and prizes awarded by the faculty and by outside organizations also gave testimony to the high academic quality of the class.

Giving the senior address, Clarke Bruno '81 expressed gratitude for “the great gift of a Swarthmore education,” in an environment conducive to academic and social growth and maturity in which lasting friendships were formed, self-confidence was boosted, courage was gained, and faculty shared their wisdom and insights.

Bruno concluded with the following thought: “The Gospel of Luke 12:48 advises us, ‘For unto whomsoever much is given, of him shall be much required.’ Swarthmore—the institution, the academics, and the friends—has given us a great gift. Much is expected of us, and we expect much of each other.”

The four recipients of honorary degrees were author Margaret Hope Bacon, Professor of Linguistics Henry M. Hoenigswald, entrepreneur Eugene M. Lang '38, and Willis D. Weatherford, president of Berea College.

Margaret Hope Bacon of Philadelphia, author of Valiant Friend: The Life of Lucretia Mott and a number of other books related to Quaker history, is assistant secretary for information and interpretation of the American Friends Service Committee. As a writer of children's books, a journalist conveying concern for human rights, an active worker for women's rights, and a Quaker historian, she has spent time in Africa, Europe, Japan, China, the USSR, and Greece.

A mother, a grandmother, and wife, she is a member of the Corporation of Haverford College and of Friends Hospital, and vice president of the Pennsylvania Abolition Society. She is an honorary curator of the Friends Historical Library at the College, and is active in the Friends Historical Association and the Historical Oversight Committee of the Mayor's Commission on Women.

Henry M. Hoenigswald was educated at the Universities of Munich, Zurich, Padua, and Florence. He first lectured at the University of Pennsylvania as part of the Army's specialized training program in 1943–44 and later returned to Penn as an associate professor in 1948. He became a full professor in 1959, served as chairman of the Department of Linguistics from 1963 to 1970, and as co-chairman from 1978–79. Before going to Penn, he taught at Yale University and the University of Texas. While at Penn, he also taught at Deccan College in India, Kiel University in Germany, and Oxford University in England.

The author and editor of a number of linguistic books, Hoenigswald has been chairman of the overseers visiting committee on linguistics at Harvard and a member of the corporate visiting committee on foreign literature and linguistics at M.I.T.

Eugene M. Lang '38, entrepreneur, civic leader, philanthropist, patron of the arts, and devoted alumnus, first tested his entrepreneurial skills as an undergraduate by managing a laundry service for students. He has since come to play a leading role in both private and public efforts to bring revenues to small American manufacturers through overseas licensing and joint ventures.

While at Swarthmore, Lang espoused liberal causes—he wanted to be a social worker, he volunteered time in a settlement house in Philadelphia, and he

"It seems that the road to the truth is occasionally paved with bad intentions. Genius, we know, can be foolish, prejudiced, even wicked. Many have found it distressing that this is so. In our more mellow moods, however, we see it the other way. Myself, I have taken real inspiration and solace from the thought that explicit tenets, and even purity of incentive, along with other factors threatened by human frailty, are not all that matters, and that the things that do matter have a way of coming out right in the end."

Eugene M. Lang '38

"Our College has demanded much of you. It has insisted that you stretch the elastic limits of your minds, enhance the quality of your performance, stimulate the aggression of your intellects. It has raised the standards of what you can and should expect of yourselves. Since you are graduating today, you must have met the demands of Swarthmore. Now you will carry on with the far more difficult responsibility of fulfilling the demands you will make on yourselves."

Willis D. Weatherford, Jr.

"What is needed from colleges is not a series of pat solutions but help for students to realize the importance of moral judgments, and provision of the intellectual tools to assist them in making those judgments more effectively and on a higher plane. This is important because our society needs more leaders who can offer ideals as well as analytical skills. Colleges have the capacity to make a significant contribution to the moral fiber of our nation if they are willing to seize this nettle."

participated in the first sitdown strikes in 1936. His Halcyon predicted that he would be president of the CIO, and the ADA recently named him their Businessman of the Year.

Founder and president of Refac Technology Development Corporation, Lang has served as an advisor to the United States Department of Commerce since 1956 and has been a member of trade missions to France, India, Japan, the Phillipines, Burma, Australia, and New Zealand. In 1963 he received a citation from President John F. Kennedy for significantly aiding the export expansion program in America.

He helped launch the first black entrepreneur program in the New York City area and was chairman of the board of The Circle in the Square Theatre from 1972 to 1978. A member of the President's Advisory Committee on Science and Innovation from 1978-80, he is currently national vice chairman of Americans for Democratic Action and a trustee of the Metropolitan Opera Association and the New School for Social Research.

As chairman of The Program for Swarthmore and donor of the largest single gift ever made to the College, Lang has led The Program for Swarthmore to a successful conclusion six months ahead of schedule. Lang's other contributions to Swarthmore include a daughter and a son, Jane Lang McGrew '67 and Stephen Lang '75.

Willis D. Weatherford, Jr., president of Berea College, joined the College faculty in 1948 as a member of the Department of Economics, where he remained for seventeen years after which he left to become dean of Carleton College. Trained as a labor economist, Weatherford has a B.A. from Vanderbilt, a B.D. from Yale Divinity School, and an M.A. and a Ph.D. from Harvard. During his years at Swarthmore he traveled to India and to Malaya on economic development missions, and was assistant director of VISTA from 1964 to 1965.

As president of Berea, he has been a leader in a unique form of higher education which involves students in a distinctive work program while they pursue their liberal arts training. He guided the community through the turmoil of the late sixties and seventies, expanded the opportunities available to students from Appalachia, and strengthened many academic departments at Berea. He is married to Ann Smith Weatherford '51, and four of the five Weatherford children were born in Swarthmore.

College appoints two professors to named chairs

Two Swarthmore professors have received endowed chairs at the College. H. Searl Dunn was named the Henry C. and J. Archer Turner Professor of Engineering, and J. William Frost was named the Howard M. and Charles F.

Jenkins Professor of Quaker History and Research.

Searl Dunn received B.S.E. and M.S.E. degrees from Princeton University and a Ph.D. in electrical engineering from Brown University. In addition to teaching at Brown and at the University of Rochester, he has worked on engineering projects at the Martin Aircraft Company in Baltimore and at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration in Washington, D.C. He joined the engineering faculty at Swarthmore in 1973.

Professor Dunn is a member of the American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics, the Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers, the American Society for Engineering Education on whose engineering design committee he served from 1971 to 1974, and the American Association of University Professors. In addition to publishing in many professional journals, he has served as a consultant to the General Railway Signal Corporation, the Rochester Applied Science Associates, the Eastman Kodak Company, and the Xerox Corporation.

J. William Frost was educated at DePauw University, Yale Divinity School, and the University of Wisconsin, which awarded his Ph.D. degree. He taught at both Wisconsin and Vassar before joining the faculty of Swarthmore in 1973 as associate professor of religion and director of Friends Historical Library. He is a member of the Friends Historical Association, and chairman of its historical research committee; Phi Beta Kappa; the advisory board of the Philadelphia Center for Early American History; the advisory board for William Penn Papers Project; and the Pennsylvania Historical Association. He is currently editor of the Pennsylvania Magazine of History and Biography.

Author of The Quaker Family in Colonial America and many papers and reviews in professional journals, Frost is also the editor of Quaker Origins of Antislavery and The Keithian Controversy in Early America. At present Frost is involved in the 300th anniversary celebration of Pennsylvania's founder, William Penn. This event will be celebrated in March at the University of Pennsylvania where Frost will present a paper, "The Affirmation Controversy and Religious Liberty." His main academic concern this past year has been religious liberty in Colonial Pennsylvania; the results of his findings will be published in the near future. He is also working on a book on Quaker history.

Clement M. Biddle '31 dies, longtime member of the Board of Managers

The College community learned with sadness of the death on August 24 of Clement M. Biddle '31, emeritus member of the Board of Managers.

Clement Biddle was active in alumni programs, in fundraising and recruiting in the Chicago and New Jersey areas, and until recently had served as president of his class. He was a member of the Board of Managers from 1956 to 1967 and again from 1969 until his designation as emeritus member in 1976. He participated in the work of the executive committee and the committees for student life, development, and finance, and chaired the committee on instruction and libraries.

Most of his professional life was spent in the Biddle Purchasing Company, a family-founded business. He worked as a buyer for the company after graduation and eventually became president and chairman of the board. He served also on the boards of the Bank of Tokyo Trust Co., and Centennial Industries, Inc. His civic contributions were many, to local government in Winnetka, Illinois, and to the boards of George Williams College, Kent Place School, Overlook Hospital, and Devereux Schools.

He is survived by his wife Elizabeth Reed Biddle and three children: Clement Biddle '57, C. Richard Biddle, and Julie A. Zimmerman '68. His first wife, Jean Fahringer Biddle '30, died in 1973.

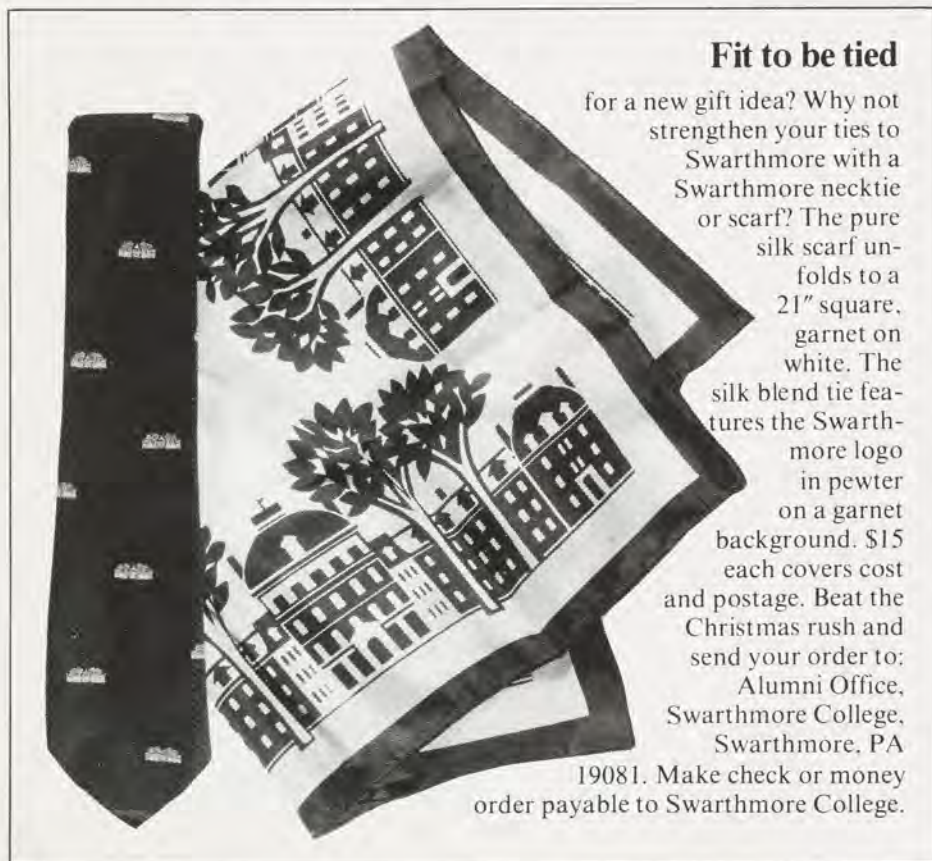

Clem Biddle's association with Swarthmore began long before his arrival as a freshman. As he wrote: "My contact with Swarthmore really started when I was two days old. That was my official entry date and has been a source of fun and pride. My father was not taking any chances." His father and mother, Clement and Grace Biddle, attended Swarthmore (in the classes of 1886 and 1887 respectively), as did his sisters, Elizabeth '25, Caroline '28, and Grace '34.

The Biddle family's support had begun as early as the College's founding, when two Biddles solicited subscriptions for the establishment of Swarthmore. In 1928 the family provided facilities for the Friends Historical Library, and in 1973 the Biddle Foundation made a leading gift to the Swarthmore Challenge Fund.

ANNUAL FUNDS 1980-81

REPORT OF DONORS TO THE PROGRAM FOR SWARTHMORE

The Program for Swarthmore: Millions from Thousands

Neil R. Austrian '61
Chairman of the Development Committee,
Board of Managers

The Program for Swarthmore has ended in resounding victory—more than $6 million oversubscribed and six months ahead of schedule.

Equally important as The Program's final dollar tally of $36.5 million is the fact that 13,373 individuals and organizations participated. This Report of Donors to The Program for Swarthmore gratefully recognizes and is dedicated to the thousands of donors who are listed in the following pages.

By any standards, participation in The Program was remarkable—67.5% of the alumni, 72% of the students, 77% of the faculty, and thousands of friends, parents, members of the College staff, companies, and foundations. This broad-based outpouring of support reveals a unity among Swarthmoreans and other friends of the College. It reflects a shared belief that our College fulfills a vitally important educational purpose which merits strong financial support. 13,373 donors have offered testimony which is both convincing and compelling.

A recent "victory issue" of the Garnet Letter featured the many accomplishments of The Program—the buildings constructed and renovated, the scholarships and professorships endowed, the life-income gifts funded, and the academic curriculum strengthened. Major donors were singled out for deserved recognition in that special publication.

But the great mass of donors who contributed to The Program did so by sending current, unrestricted gifts . . . gifts with no strings attached . . . gifts from $5 to $500.

Such universal support was hoped for but not necessarily anticipated when The Program for Swarthmore was formulated by the Development Planning Groups (DPGs) in the mid-1970s. But alumni, student, staff, and faculty DPG members reached a key decision which ultimately proved crucial to the victory all Swarthmoreans can now celebrate.

It was decided that Annual Funds, an amalgamation of the Alumni Fund, Parents Fund, Commerce and Industry Fund, and Friends Fund, would take their place among the several objectives of the campaign. These Annual Funds, which might have faded into Swarthmore's development landscape, retained their identity and function as the primary conduit for grassroots, unrestricted support by a full spectrum of individuals and organizations. In short, all of the Annual Funds were alive and well as an integral component of The Program for Swarthmore.

Further, The Program planners stressed the importance of growth in Annual Funds revenue to offset inflation, and urged maximum participation by all constituencies. Ambitious yearly goals were set, calling for Annual Funds gift income to double from approximately $500,000 in 1976-1977 to more than $1 million in 1980-81. It was hardly a "business as usual" ap-

1980-81 Annual Funds Set a New Record For Giving

Barbara Brooks Smoyer '37
National Chairman
Swarthmore Annual Funds

Current, unrestricted gifts to Annual Funds set another record in 1980-81, the climactic year of the four-year Program for Swarthmore.

$1,097,150 in annual gifts was credited during the fundraising year which ran from July 1, 1980 to June 30, 1981, topping the goal of $1,060,000 by nearly $40,000 and registering an improvement of almost $100,000 over the previous year's total—or a 10% increase.

Annual Funds has four principal component funds: Alumni, Parents, Friends, and Commerce and Industry.

Leading the way is the Alumni Fund, about which there was both good news and bad news in 1980-81. The good news was that alumni annual gifts totaled $981,630—narrowly missing an ambitious $1-million goal. The bad news was that, once again, 50% alumni participation proved elusive. Alumni participation actually slipped a bit—from 48.5% in 1979-80 to 47.1% last year.

Regarded as a benchmark in college fundraising, 50% alumni participation was achieved by Swarthmoreans for the first time in 1978-79. Alumni Fund appeal literature and telephone solicitation constantly stress the importance of every gift, no matter how large or small. Our experience last year bears this out. It is tantalizing to note that approximately 350 additional alumni gifts would have put the Alumni Fund over the 50% participation mark.

Annual Funds depend upon other constituencies, too. Non-alumni parents contributed $76,620 last year; friends $10,200; and businesses, $28,700. Included in alumni giving totals was nearly $150,000 in matching gifts from a wide variety of companies and employers.

One of the highlights of the 1980-81 year was the presentation on Alumni Day of five Alumni Fund awards, several of which were given for the first time.

The Water Tower Trophy, given for the highest percentage of participation among Garnet Sage classes, was awarded to the proach to the difficult challenge of raising significantly increased current gift income during a major capital campaign.

Happily, you—alumni, parents, friends, students, corporations, foundations, and others—responded magnificently.

During the four years of The Program, your gifts to Annual Funds accounted for more than $3.5 million, or 9.7% of the campaign total. Your participation was equally impressive. More than 98% of the 13,373 donors contributed current, unrestricted gifts via Annual Funds.

Percentage of participation in any fundraising venture serves as an ideal barometer of both financial and spiritual support enjoyed by the sponsoring institution. Your support of Swarthmore during The Program was vigorous.

Leaders and volunteers played an important role. The Program total of $36.5 million could not have been attained had it not been for the leadership of President Theodore Friend, Vice President Kendall Landis '48 and his staff, and such key volunteers as Julien Cornell '30, Eugene M. Lang '38, Charles C. Price '34, and Annual Funds Chairmen Walter T. Skallerup, Jr. '42 and Barbara Brooks Smoyer '37. Nor could the College have registered such success without the steadfast work of a determined network of volunteers.

It was your response which rewarded and justified their collective efforts and hard work.

All donors, whether they gave ten or ten thousand dollars, shared a sense of respect and caring for Swarthmore. The relationship between leadership donors and grass-roots donors proved symbiotic: One group motivated the other.

The Program for Swarthmore has concluded, but Swarthmore will continue to need our support this year and in the years to come. The Program was not a beginning or an end, but a stage in an ongoing effort to ensure that Swarthmore would remain in the strongest possible position from which to accomplish its purpose: the education of students who become more valuable human beings and more useful members of society.

Class of 1916 (Class Agent: L. Hyatt Eby) for an amazing 100% participation.

The Dean Everett L. Hunt Award, for the pre-50th reunion class with the highest percentage of participation, was presented to the Class of 1938 (Class Agent: Marian Snyder Ware) for 60.3% participation.

The Class of 1956 (Co-agents Jessica Heimbach Raymond and Chris McMurtrie) marked its 25th Reunion in generous style and earned two awards: The President's Trophy, for the class (excluding the 50th-reunion class) with the largest total gift to the Alumni Fund, and the Kay Bassett Award for the largest increase in class giving (again, excluding the 50th-reunion class). The silver anniversary class contributed $58,309 to the Alumni Fund, an increase of $36,129 over their total for the previous year. In recognition of this great effort, the College has established a Class of 1956 scholarship.

The McCabe Award was received by the Class of 1972 (Class Agent: Cigus Vanni) for recording the highest percentage of participation — 41% — among classes graduated within the last ten years.

Contributions to Annual Funds do not magically appear at the College post office. A dedicated group of volunteers and Swarthmore's capable Fund Office staff work together to raise every dollar. I would like to thank all the volunteers, including class agents, reunion fund committee members, and phonathon volunteers who made Annual Funds such a success during 1980-81 and the preceding years of The Program for Swarthmore. Special thanks are due to volunteers who helped lead our efforts: Walter T. Skallerup, Jr. '42, my predecessor as national chairman; Ed Mahler '50, vice chairman of the Annual Funds Committee; Peter '38 and Barbara Wetzel Kaspar '38, chairmen of the Garnet Circle; and Richard and Nancy MacGrath, Robin and Carol Farkas, and Edwin S. Rockefeller, past chairmen of the Parents Fund Committee.

Swarthmore is fortunate to have a talented group of staff members in the Annual Funds office. We will miss Robin Moll, former director of Annual Giving, who departed for a new position at Hahnemann Medical College in July. Co-Director Marilyn Rothberg has assumed the director's position and inherits an effective, hardworking staff.

Swarthmoreans can take great pride in the success of The Program for Swarthmore and recognize the important role played by Annual Funds. While the capital campaign has ended, Annual Funds will continue to support the needs of the College in 1981-82 and beyond.

I ask your renewed and increased support so that there will be no letdown in the aftermath of the monumentally successful Program for Swarthmore.

A phone call during a phonathon, a letter to your classmate, $25 or $2,500 in response to an Alumni Fund appeal letter . . . these are some of the ways you can help strengthen our College.

Drop a Name

Samuel Brackeen '68: Alumni Council really brings you close to the College and gives the opportunity to provide input to an organization that seems to be able to do something about problems.

Babette Barbash Weksler '58: Alumni Council gives you the chance to talk to alumni of many different eras and backgrounds.

John Ferguson, Jr. '41: Alumni Council provides the opportunity to exchange ideas about what alumni can do to help the College... I am completely turned on by the perspicacity of the students.

The Swarthmore College Alumni Association has made a difference over its proud one-hundred-year history: in attracting the best students to Swarthmore, in helping upperclassmen acquire a taste of working in the real world through the Extern Program and in widening their horizons through career counseling, in focusing alumni opinion on major issues on campus, such as the Program in Education and the Honors/Course Programs, and in enriching students' Swarthmore experience through academic and social interaction.

There is still more that organized alumni can do to strengthen the College over the next critical years as higher education confronts inflation and a marked decline in the numbers of college-age men and women. The Alumni Association needs your ideas. It needs you.

Please take a few minutes to think about those Swarthmoreans you know who are interested in the College, who would like to become involved again with campus life—in short, who would be willing to contribute their time and talent as members of the Association's governing body, the Alumni Council. We would be happy to hear if you yourself would welcome this opportunity to serve.

The Nominating Committee seeks your suggestions also for the two positions of Alumni Manager on the Board of Managers.

Drop a name (or names): Put your suggestions in the mail today. They can make a difference!

Nominations and supporting statements should be mailed to the Alumni Office, attention of Diana Judd Stevens '63, Chair, Nominating Committee.

Deadline for nominations is November 1.

Alumni Association seeks Nominations for Board of Managers and Alumni Council.

The Swarthmore College Alumni Association is seeking nominations for two positions of Alumni Manager on the Board of Managers and for members of the Alumni Council. Every person who has ever attended Swarthmore is encouraged to participate in the activities of the Alumni Association.

The Association elects two alumni—one man and one woman—each year to the Board of Managers for four-year terms. In addition, fourteen positions on the Alumni Council must be filled.

Vacancies for the Alumni Council occur in the following zones as indicated:

Zone A New Jersey (Atlantic, Burlington, Camden, Cape May, Cumberland, Gloucester, Hunterdon, Mercer, Ocean, Salem, Warren Counties), Pennsylvania (except Western Pennsylvania). 2 men and 2 women.

Zone B Connecticut, New Jersey (Bergen, Essex, Hudson, Middlesex, Monmouth, Morris, Passaic, Somerset, Sussex, and Union Counties), New York. 2 men and 2 women.

Zone C Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Vermont. No vacancies.

Zone D Delaware, District of Columbia, Maryland, Virginia. 1 man and 1 woman.

Zone E Ohio, Western Pennsylvania (Allegheny, Armstrong, Beaver, Butler, Clarion, Crawford, Erie, Fayette, Greene, Lawrence, Mercer, Venango, Washington, and Westmoreland Counties), West Virginia. No vacancies.

Zone F Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas. 1 man and 1 woman.

Zone G Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, North Dakota, South Dakota, Wisconsin. 1 man and 1 woman.

Zone H Alaska, Arizona, California, Colorado, Hawaii, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, Oregon, Utah, Washington, Wyoming, territories, and foreign countries. No vacancies.

a Proclamation

Whereas, one hundred years ago, on November 20, 1881, the Swarthmore College Alumni Association voted to become an incorporated body, and was incorporated in 1882 under the laws of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, and

Whereas, under the Constitution of the Alumni Association, all graduates and former students of Swarthmore College are considered Alumni and are automatically members of this Association,

Whereby, said membership totals nearly 14,000 Alumni worldwide, who have aimed high and served well, distinguishing themselves not only in the professions, in education, in business, in government, in the arts, and in the sciences, but also in their communities using their talents to give leadership to civic activities, and

Whereby, said membership through loyalty and service to Swarthmore has made a vital difference in realizing the College's aim to provide "an education equal to that furnished by the best colleges in the land,"

Therefore, we salute Swarthmore Alumni who have provided the College with a guiding continuity for more than a century and who have served it well as the keepers of tradition, the stewards of the enterprise, and the exemplars of its experience, and

Therefore, we call upon Alumni in the four corners of the earth to share our pride as we announce a year-long festival of special events honoring the Alumni and proclaim 1981-82 the Year of the

Swarthmore Alumni Centennial Celebration
