Churchmen Present Party Speakers At School

An old-fashioned Town Meeting, at which local residents will have an unequalled opportunity to hear about, and discuss, the issues of the present political campaign, will be held next Thursday evening October 12, in the auditorium of the Swarthmore High School.

All Swarthmoreans are cordially invited to attend the meeting which will start at 8 P. M.

Two prominent political leaders will come here to present the platforms and arguments of the two major political parties. Representing the Republicans will be Lieutenant Governor John C. Bell, while the Democratic Party will be represented by Todd Daniel, former United States Attorney and former division superintendent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation in the Philadelphia area.

Each man will explain how his party stands on the major issues of the day, both domestic and foreign.

There will be no debate, but at the end of the speaking members of the audience will be given an opportunity to ask questions from the floor.

The Town Meeting is being sponsored by the men's organizations of the local churches including the Men's Brotherhood of the Swarthmore Presbyterian Church, the Methodist's Men's Club and the Trinity Episcopal Church Men's Club. The Rev. David Braun pastor of the Swarthmore Presbyterian Church will be chairman.

The meeting was arranged with the thought in mind that it was the civic duty of all Swarthmoreans to be informed of the issues in the present political campaign as a basis for an intelligent use of the voting power at the polls in November. It is hoped that a large crowd will attend.

They're There When You Need Them

The borough's fire fighting equipment has seen steady service since 1908 when it was organized. Village old-timers remember its efficient work during these 37 years with real appreciation. Fire fighters Whitecar, Terrells, Place, Rumsey, Gettz—to name only a few in the long list of residents whose years of service as volunteer firemen have contributed arduous though exciting labor, to the borough—saved many a proud landmark.

Pictured left are the trucks which are always ready to bring well trained and careful volunteer firemen to your aid in an emergency. They, themselves, are weathering an emergency with creditable efficiency for many of Swarthmore's fire fighters are fighting their country's war just now. This means that the fire siren calls your local business men away from their offices and stores. With help scarce everywhere this also means that some business houses must close while firemen fight your fires.

Fire Prevention Week is always marked by careful householders. This year your volunteer firemen ask your intelligent cooperation in fire prevention. Field fires—almost always preventable—call your fire company out at great cost in equipment and time. Standing guard over open fires will prevent calling the fire company. Other precautionary measures are listed in this issue.

BLOOD DONOR MEET APPROACHES

Mrs. Phelps Soule Is Chairman of Group Nov. 1, 2, & 3

With Swarthmore's next Blood Donor dates November 1, 2, and 3 rapidly approaching Mrs. Phelps Soule chairman of this Red Cross activity for the borough is heartened by the seven voluntary calls for appointments she has received to date.

No cards will be sent by the committee to former donors since this has proved not only expensive but comparatively futile in the past. Donors are therefore urged to call 2883-J if they wish to secure a choice of dates and hours. They are urged to call promptly so that Swarthmore will be in the lead with a full quota.

That members of this community serving in the armed forces watch Swarthmore's record in this vital civilian support is shown by letters received from them. After the borough's poor showing in the last meet one man stationed in the South Pacific wrote to his discouraged mother on the committee, "Don't give up your blood donor work, mother, even if you have to write less to me to do it. In every campaign I've been in the first thing you see is the plasma bottle slung on the rifle. How's this for a slogan, 'Fill the bottle and win the battle'? Believe me, the guys fight better when they know they've got more chance to come out."

After the same meet an eloquent protest against the borough's seeming indifference was written by a former physician here Dr. Paul T. Strong who is now in New Guinea with a University of Pennsylvania medical unit. An excerpt from that letter reads, "It seems almost unbelievable that it would be necessary to beg people to sign up because only 37 out of over 400 had signed up 10 days before the 'meet.' As a rule, I pass my Swarthmorean around among my friends, but I have kept these two issues close to my chest—yes, because I was ashamed. I have tried to figure out why. Do the people not realize the need for plasma and the tremendous value of it in life-saving and health building? Do they not believe that we need lots of it, and more and more of it? Are they too busy with their own private pursuits to be bothered? Do they think the war is about over, and that help of that sort from the home front will soon not be necessary? Do they believe this war is a concern of their neighbor and their neighbor's sons and daughters in the service, and not their own? Why? No matter what the answer, it is most disheartening and discouraging to me, and I feel sure that it will be to every service man and woman who reads those two editorials.

Remembering that out of every 100 casualties 30 need plasma and that out of those 30 most need six to eight units, many 10 or more, prompt calls for appointments. If the emergency were within sight and grasp of this community none would hesitate to aid. With over 500 Swarthmoreans in the fight and some of those already having given their lives the emergency is within the grasp if not the sight of every civilian left here.

Last Call!

The Red Cross is sponsoring a Home Nursing course in Swarthmore which is to begin in October. Ten more people, however, are needed in order to have a sufficient number to start the class.

Anyone who wishes to join the group is asked to call Mrs. Margaret C. Neal, chairman of home nursing, Swarthmore 2156-J.

THE FOURTH TERM versus
THE PEOPLE OF THE UNITED STATES

Testimony for the Defense of the People:

1. "An early example of rotation in an office of so high and delicate a nature, may equally accord with the republican spirit of our Constitution, and the ideas of liberty and safety entertained by the people . . . There cannot be the least danger that the President will by any practicable intrigue ever be able to continue himself for one moment in office (beyond 8 years), much less perpetuate himself in it, BUT IN THE LAST STAGE OF CORRUPTED MORALS AND POLITICAL DEPRAVITY."—GEORGE WASHINGTON.

2. "Reason and experience tell us, that the first magistrate will always be re-elected if he may be re-elected. He is then an officer for life . . . That I should lay down my charge at a proper period, is as much a duty as to have borne it faithfully . . . I SHOULD UNWILLINGLY BE THE FIRST PERSON WHO, DISREGARDING THE SOUND PRECEDENT SET BY AN ILLUSTRIOUS PREDECESSOR, SHOULD FURNISH THE FIRST EXAMPLE OF PROLONGATION BEYOND THE SECOND TERM OF OFFICE . . . NO PRETEXT SHOULD EVER BE PERMITTED TO DISPENSE WITH IT (THE PRINCIPLE OF ROTATION IN OFFICE) BECAUSE THERE NEVER WILL BE A TIME WHEN REAL DIFFICULTIES WILL NOT EXIST, AND FURNISH A PLAUSIBLE PRETEXT FOR DISPENSATION."—THOMAS JEFFERSON (founder of the Democratic Party).

3. "If the terms of those officers (President and Vice-President) be limited to a single period of either four or six years, I think our liberties would possess an additional safeguard."—ANDREW JACKSON (Democratic President).

4. "It is the part of wisdom for a republic to limit the service of that officer (the President) to a period so short as to prevent his forgetting that he is the accountable agent, not the principal: THE SERVANT, NOT THE MASTER."—WILLIAM HARRISON (in his inaugural address as President).

5. "The example of Washington, which has been followed by Jefferson, Madison, and Monroe, has forever determined that NO PRESIDENT SHALL BE MORE THAN ONCE RE-ELECTED. THIS PRINCIPLE IS NOW BECOME AS SACRED AS IF IT WERE WRITTEN IN THE CONSTITUTION."—JAMES BUCHANAN (Democratic President).

6. "When we consider the patronage of this great office, the allurements of power, the temptation to retain public office once gained, and more than all—the availability a party finds in an incumbent whom a horde of office holders, with a zeal born of benefits received and fostered by the hope of favors yet to come, stand ready to aid with money and trained political assistance, WE RECOGNIZE IN THE ELIGIBILITY OF THE PRESIDENT FOR RE-ELECTION THE MOST SERIOUS DANGER TO THAT CALM, DELIBERATE, AND INTELLIGENT ACTION WHICH MUST CHARACTERIZE A GOVERNMENT BY THE PEOPLE."—GROVER CLEVELAND (Democratic President).

7. "We declare it to be the unwritten law of this Republic, established by custom and usage of one hundred years, and sanctioned by the examples of the greatest and wisest of those who founded and have maintained our Government, that NO MAN SHOULD BE ELIGIBLE FOR A THIRD TERM OF THE PRESIDENTIAL OFFICE."—Plank in the Platform adopted by the Democratic Party's National Convention in 1896.

8. "There are new questions of the gravest importance before the Administration and the country, and their just consideration should not be prejudiced in the public mind by even the suspicion of the thought of a third term . . . I not only am not and will not be a candidate for a third term, but I would not accept a nomination for it if it were tendered to me."—WILLIAM MCKINLEY.

9. "Wise custom . . . limits the President to two terms . . . I believe in a strong executive; I believe in power; but I believe that responsibility should go with power, and that it is not well that the strong executive should be a perpetual executive."—THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

10. "It is intolerable that any President should be permitted to determine who should succeed him—himself or another—by patronage or coercion, or by any sort of control of the machinery by which delegates to the nominating convention are chosen."—WOODROW WILSON (Democratic President).

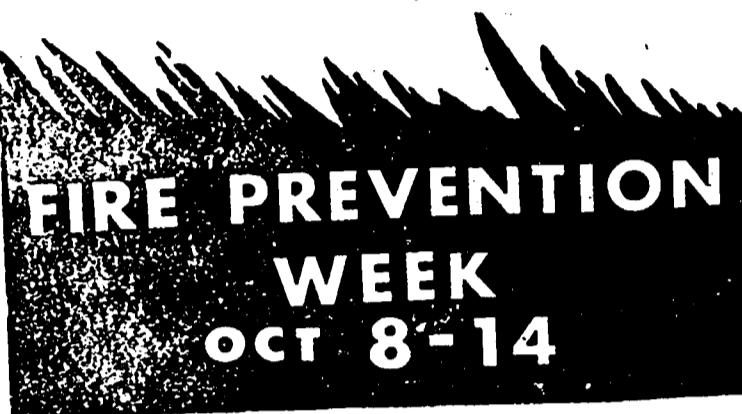

"A great man left a watchword we can well repeat: 'There is no indispensable man' . . . I still know that the fate of America cannot depend on any one man. THE GREATNESS OF AMERICA IS GROUNDED IN PRINCIPLES AND NOT ON ANY SINGLE PERSONALITY."—FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT (in 1932, when he was Democratic Presidential Candidate).

"SHOULD A PRESIDENT CONSENT TO BE A CANDIDATE FOR A THIRD ELECTION, I TRUST HE WOULD BE REJECTED ON THIS DEMONSTRATION OF AMBITIOUS VIEWS."—THOMAS JEFFERSON.

The above was paid for by a group of Swarthmore Citizens who believe in the return to those principles upon which this nation was founded.

H & S CALLS 1ST MEETING OCT. 9

Grades Join Annual High School Night

The traditional opening of the Swarthmore Home and School Association will occur on Monday, October 9, when the high school faculty, parents and pupils will meet again in "sample school," according to announcement by Robert J. Cadigan, president of the association.

There will be a brief meeting in the high school auditorium at 8 o'clock for general announcements and some discussion of plans by which the association hopes to further intelligent cooperation between parents and the school faculty. By 8:30 P. M. parents and pupils will be in their places in the various classrooms where a typical daily schedule will be followed. While class periods will be shortened, according to Principal Frank R. Morey, who is also chairman of the meeting, there will be adequate time for the teachers to explain their class work, its purpose and general scope, what will be expected of the children, what constitutes good performance, how parents can help, the use of reference material, and other points which may be instructive or interesting to parents, thus providing an excellent introduction to parent-teacher-pupil effort throughout the year.

For the second time in the history of "High School nights" grade teachers will participate and will be in the classrooms to talk with parents of the youngsters and explain the work of the earlier grades.

Robert N. Hilkert first vice-president and chairman of programs has announced that there will be four meetings this year instead of the usual six. He and his committee are preparing a program that they believe will be of value to both teachers and parents. Topics and speakers will be announced later for the meetings which are scheduled for November 27, March 5, 1945 and April 23, 1945. It will be noted that the regular second-Monday-of-the-month dates have been abandoned. Mr. Hilkert who is a former dean of the Hill School and has worked with the

The signers of the following letter are a very small proportion of the many here in Swarthmore who are regular and faithful blood donors.

There is no need to stress the importance or the urgency of giving blood for the Armed Forces. Some of us have been giving from the very beginning, some of us for not so long, some gave without thinking much about it, but some were timid and had to be plucked up courage.

First Reader L. K. Voight of Chester Heights introduced the speaker. Jesus was Mr. Davis who is a member of the Board of Lectureship of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ Scientist in Boston, Massachusetts, stated that usually when people take up the study of Christian Science they are searching for release from pain or sorrow, little dreaming that the underlying Principle of Christian Science is regeneration through clearer concept of God and His laws. Two questions come naturally to the beginner: They are, "What is Christian Science?" and "How does Christian Science accomplish its healing work?"

In the course of his lecture he delved into the following topics: Jesus the Exemplar, A Definition of Christian Science, Prayer Defined, Healing through Christian Science, The Method Jesus Used, and Universal Healing.

In conclusion Mr. Davis quoted Mary Baker Eddy, "Sooner or later the whole human race will learn that in proportion as the spotless selfhood of God is understood, human nature will be renovated, and man will receive a higher selfhood, derived from God, and the redemption of mortals from sin, sickness, and death be established on everlasting foundations."

"When we learn the way in which God created the world, and understand God's creation, Christian Science and recognize—all the glories of earth and man's spiritual being, we shall behold heaven and man."

"AT THE VERY OUTSET I want to make one thing clear. This is not merely a campaign against an individual or a political party. It is not merely a campaign to displace a tired, exhausted, quarreling and bickering administration with a fresh and vigorous administration. It is a campaign against an administration which was conceived in defeatism, which failed for eight straight years to restore our domestic economy, which has been the most wasteful, extravagant and incompetent administration in the history of the nation and worst of all, one which has lost faith in itself and in the American people."

BELAY PLANS FOR GOBLIN WALK Business Association Postpones 14th Parade 'Until '45

Ghosts, goblins, pumpkin heads, and other Halloween "spirits" have to wait until the fall of '45 to parade to the rhythmic strains of the High School Band. The Business Association deems it necessary to call off the community Halloween parade although plans were already afoot for the event.

John E. Michael, president of the association speaking in behalf of its members announces, "It is with deep regret that we find it impossible to continue with the Halloween Parade plans under the present, threatening circumstances and we are all looking forward to sponsoring a bigger and better success next year."

The association wishes to thank the college for granting the use of the field house for the event which it has so generously offered for five consecutive years and the High School Band for its promised entertainment for which the association has been so appreciative in the past.

This year would have marked the fourteenth consecutive year that the organization has sponsored the Halloween Parade which is considered one of the highlights of the year. It always has been enjoyed enthusiastically by adult participants as by the children of the borough.

We are unalterably opposed to the policy of the present Administration, pursued over a period of twelve years, of seeking to make government the Master instead of the servant of the people.

THE CHOICE OF A CANDIDATE

THE NEW YORK TIMES, which opposed Mr. Roosevelt in 1940, supports him in 1944.

A full and frank statement of the considerations which have led us to this decision is due our readers.

We can begin by saying that we have not changed our minds about the domestic record of the Roosevelt Administration. That record falls naturally into two stages: the original New Deal of the first Administration and the re-made New Deal of the later years.

To most of the initial measures of the first New Deal this newspaper gave its admiration and support. These measures were aimed at correcting abuses and extravagances revealed by the depression that began early in Mr. Hoover's Administration; at reviving the hopes of millions of people thrown out of work through no fault of their own; at establishing in this country a larger degree of social justice. Among these measures were the Social Security Act, the National Housing Act, the early measures for relief of unemployment, the laws regulating the activities of the national stock exchanges, whose abrupt collapse had ushered in the Great Depression. There is no debate now, though there was then, about the merits of these measures. Both parties now support them.

With the developments of the New Deal during Mr. Roosevelt's second term more troublesome questions arose. A new philosophy stepped in to direct the earlier reforms. This philosophy was based on a new-found conviction that the private enterprise system in this country had deteriorated to a point where its weakness could be offset only by more and more centralized governmental control of the national economy, and by more and more governmental spending.

This was the period when the Administration encouraged faith in the omnipotence of the state; when it embarked upon deliberate "deficit-financing"; when it sought ever-increasing power for the Executive; when it tried to "purge" members of Congress who had dared to disagree even with a small part of its program; when it attempted to pack the Supreme Court itself because that institution had stood in the way of changes it thought necessary. This was the period, also, when the President's weakness in matters of Administration began to reveal itself in the quarrels of many of its chief lieutenants; quarrels which have continued to this day.

This newspaper made its position clear in all these matters. It fought the Court-packing plan to the best of its ability. It opposed the "purges." It repeatedly urged upon the President the necessity of reforming his methods of administration. It attacked the whole philosophy of "deficit-financing" by which the country was expected to grow richer by going deeper into debt. It opposed the increasing centralization of authority in Washington at the expense of healthy local government. It opposed the President's third term. It can accept a fourth term only with deep reluctance and strong misgivings, and solely as being justified by the alternatives actually presented to us in a year of war and crisis.

With all the major new policies of the second New Deal we have no sympathy. But when we weigh the balance on domestic issues we must ask: What alternatives do Mr. Dewey and the Republicans offer us?

In some respects we believe that an administration led by Mr. Dewey would do a better job in the domestic field than the three Administrations led by Mr. Roosevelt. After twelve years a new broom in Washington is badly needed.

We believe that Mr. Dewey has shown more interest than Mr. Roosevelt in establishing conditions under which business enterprise can prosper. We are confident that he would not make mistakes of the kind that Mr. Roosevelt made when he tried to pack the Court. He is more naturally interested than Mr. Roosevelt in the whole problem of administration and he could therefore be expected to make a better job of it. He has been a good Executive in Albany; in Washington he would certainly not tolerate the bickering which arises from divided authority and duplication of responsibility. We think he would remove incompetent officials promptly, instead of keeping them at their desks, praising their accomplishments, and creating new agencies to do their work.

These are all important points in the domestic picture. But they argued more strongly in Mr. Dewey's favor before the campaign started, before the Republicans wrote their platform and before Mr. Dewey began his speeches. There are now other factors in the domestic situation.

The first of these domestic factors is the tariff.

Throughout its whole career, and with special emphasis during the critical interlude between the two Great Wars, this newspaper has fought for the lowering of barriers to international trade. We believe that bold action today is needed here, not only for our own prosperity but in order to create the kind of world in which peace itself will have a chance to prosper.

What does the Republican party propose to do about the tariff?

It proposes to destroy Mr. Hull's multilateral trade-agreement plan, the most constructive experiment in tariff reform undertaken by this country in a generation. It proposes to replace this plan with a series of bi-lateral agreements. And it proposes to make even this narrow and inadequate program wholly self-defeating by requiring specific Congressional approval of every change that is ever made in any tariff item. The confusion of Republican thought on this issue is further emphasized by the fact that Mr. Dewey himself seemed at first to think that his party had endorsed, instead of scuttled, the Hull trade plan. More recently he has left the tariff issue severely alone.

There is not the slightest reason to believe that Mr. Dewey or his party is prepared or empowered to take constructive action on this important domestic issue, where constructive action is needed both to create new jobs at home and to lay the basis of a sound international economy.

The Republican party proposes not only to do away with one of the finest achievements of the Roosevelt Administration in the domestic field—the Hull trade agreements. It proposes also to emulate the Roosevelt Administration in some of its worst mistakes. This has become increasingly clear as Mr. Dewey's campaign has developed.

Mr. Roosevelt is running on a platform which calls for Federal expenditures at a high enough level to take care of all the Government's present subsidies and benefits and special factors to special groups, and to add some more besides. This is Mr. Dewey's program too. Among other things, he has promised social security for everyone.

Mr. Roosevelt is running on a platform which calls for full employment plus governmental intervention to keep wages at their wartime levels even though the effort to keep wages at their wartime levels may defeat this much-desired full employment because the consumer cannot pay the bill. This is Mr. Dewey's program too, announced at San Francisco.

Mr. Roosevelt is running on a platform which promises Federal made-work in sufficient volume to take up all the slack in unemployment in private industry, even though such unemployment results from a price level beyond the reach of the consumer or from other unsound governmental practices. This is a potentially vast promise to which no foreseeable limits can be set. It was also Mr. Dewey's promise at San Francisco.

Mr. Roosevelt is running on a platform which promises to subsidize the farmer from the public treasury, through taxes levied on the city workers who pay the higher prices which the subsidies are intended to establish. This is also Mr. Dewey's plan.

Mr. Roosevelt is running on a platform which will require a tremendous staff of civil servants—these are the famous "bureaucrats"—to perform the manifold public services to which the platform is committed. Mr. Dewey has specified no single existing Federal agency which he would do away with. He has suggested several new Federal agencies that he believes we should have.

The further the subject is pursued, the more difficult it becomes to see any sharp distinction between the stated position of the Republican party and the Democratic party on domestic issues of this kind.

Let us turn now to foreign policy. With the war still to be won and the peace still to be made, this issue is to our minds the decisive issue of the election lowering above all domestic problems. For the truth is that no domestic problem, whether it is agriculture and its need for foreign markets, or industry, or labor, can be settled without reference to the state of peace and prosperity, or the state of insecurity or depression, in which the rest of the world finds itself.

On this issue of foreign policy we believe that the scales tip heavily in favor of the Democratic party. We say this for three reasons.

First, there is the record and the present position of the two parties themselves. The Democratic party has not only written a more forthright statement of policy. On this issue it is demonstrably more cohesive, and therefore more capable of prompt and decisive action, than the Republican party.

This is not because of any superior virtue on the part of Democrats as such. It is rather a matter of party tradition, party geography and, on the part of the professional Republican politicians who constitute the bulk of the party's strength in Congress, the long habit of opposition and the presumed necessity of defending last positions.

But there is nothing theoretical, or unimportant to the future, about the difference between the two sets of professionals in this respect. The matter has been put to the test, time after time, on issues of critical importance. Repeal of the Arms Embargo, which enabled us to arm our natural and inevitable allies; Selective Service, which gave us an active army of our own; Lend-Lease, which paved the way for the Grand Alliance of the United Nations and the organization of the peace—these are the chief measures by which the security of the American people has been defended. Every one of these measures was adopted by virtue of Democratic votes in Congress. Every one of them was opposed by large majorities of the Republican members of both the Senate and the House.

In Congress, and outside of Congress, the Republican has been, and is today, deeply divided on the issue of foreign policy. On this issue, in fact, it is not one party, but two: an isolationist Chicago Tribune Republican party, wishing to read as little as necessary into commitments given grudgingly in this year's platform; and an internationalist New York Herald Tribune Republican party, wishing to break as cleanly as possible with the mistakes in the Republican record of the past. Both factions continue to support Mr. Dewey strongly. One or the other will be disappointed.

Speaking for ourselves, it seems safer to trust the Democratic party, more united and consistent on this issue, the great responsibility of setting up the new international organization which is to defend the world's peace, and of nursing that organization through the first critical challenges and the first bitter disappointments which all too likely it will face.

Second, there is the background of the two candidates themselves.

With all Mr. Roosevelt's inconsistencies in the field of foreign policy—his shifts on the World Economic Conference, on the Neutrality Act, on the "quarantine" policy of his own invention—the fact remains that in the single greatest crisis of our times, when Britain stood alone as the outpost of civilization against the dark forces that threatened to engulf us, Mr. Roosevelt saw the issue clearly and met the issue boldly. His foreign policy from that point forward acquired a consistency which it had lacked before. The leadership which he then assumed, and to which he has held gallantly, inspired free men in every part of the world to fight with greater hope and courage.

In the acid test of that same crisis Mr. Dewey, already an established national figure, and an active candidate for his party's Presidential nomination, denounced the "interventionists" and expressed his faith that the United States could find security in isolation.

He has subsequently changed his position, and he has had every right to do so, and we have frequently expressed our satisfaction that the change has been wholly in the right direction. But on the issue of foreign policy Mr. Dewey's campaign has been very disappointing, particularly in view of the necessity of plain speaking because of his earlier position. Mr. Dewey has failed to drive home the issue hard enough to discourage even the more extreme wing of the Republican isolationists from giving him its warm support. It is still possible for local political leaders and local newspapers in different sections of the country, appealing to constituencies which hold widely different views on the post-war responsibilities which this country should assume, to interpret Mr. Dewey's

Three weeks remain before the campaign ends. During these three weeks views in a manner from which the greatest local political profit can be gathered. Mr. Dewey is to make at least one further speech on foreign policy, and may make more. We hope he will talk plainly and bluntly. But two weeks is too short a time in which to hammer out the strong party unity which the situation needs. The pattern has been set. The strategic time has passed. From the very beginning of his campaign, and long before, we have begged Mr. Dewey to do what Wendell Willkie did as citizen and would have done as nominee—carry the fight on this issue to his own isolationists so boldly that he would demonstrate beyond the shadow of doubt that the "international" faction of the Republican party is completely in control of the destinies of that party.

This Mr. Dewey has failed to do. Because of his failure we believe he would find, in the event of his election, that his mandate was obscure, his purposes were questioned and his authority was inadequate to the great demands which history would make upon it.

Finally, there is the factor of experience.

We agree entirely with Mr. Dewey that there is no such thing in a free Republic as "an indispensable man." We have never thought there was. It is not by our choice that Mr. Roosevelt is today in a position where his party can call him "indispensable." In 1940 we opposed his re-election and supported Mr. Willkie.

Nevertheless, when we come down to specific cases in the choice actually before us, we cannot dismiss as unimportant the fact that Mr. Roosevelt has a large first-hand knowledge of the problems that will arise in the making of the peace. Moreover, the great prestige and personal following among the plain peoples of the world which he has won with his war leadership might easily prove in itself to be one of the most important cohesive forces binding together a new world organization in its first experimental years.

It is on these grounds that we arrive at the conclusion that the margin of preference on the international issue runs strongly in favor of the Democratic party and its candidate. And since we believe that the international issue far overshadows the domestic issue in importance, since we believe that unless the United States does actually win the peace for which its young men are fighting we shall have at best only a fugitive few years before another war engulfs us, we arrive at the conclusion that the Democrats and Mr. Roosevelt are a wiser choice than the Republicans and Mr. Dewey.

Ours has not been an easy choice—a choice between black and white. There will be many who will disagree with us. But this we know; that our decision is the product of hard thinking and good conscience. As such we recommend it to our readers.

THE CHOICE OF A CANDIDATE

THE NEW YORK TIMES, which opposed Mr. Roosevelt in 1940, supports him in 1944.

A full and frank statement of the considerations which have led us to this decision is due our readers.

We can begin by saying that we have not changed our minds about the domestic record of the Roosevelt Administration. That record falls naturally into two stages: the original New Deal of the first Administration and the re-made New Deal of the later years.

To most of the initial measures of the first New Deal this newspaper gave its admiration and support. These measures were aimed at correcting abuses and extravagances revealed by the depression that began early in Mr. Hoover's Administration; at reviving the hopes of millions of people thrown out of work through no fault of their own; at establishing in this country a larger degree of social justice. Among these measures were the Social Security Act, the National Housing Act, the early measures for relief of unemployment, the laws regulating the activities of the national Stock exchanges, whose abrupt collapse had ushered in the Great Depression. There is no debate now, though there was then, about the merits of these measures. Both parties now support them.

With the developments of the New Deal during Mr. Roosevelt's second term more troublesome questions arose. A new philosophy stepped in to direct the earlier reforms. This philosophy was based on a new-found conviction that the private enterprise system in this country had deteriorated to a point where its weakness could be offset only by more and more centralized governmental control of the national economy, and by more and more governmental spending.

This was the period when the Administration encouraged faith in the omnipotence of the state; when it embarked upon deliberate "deficit-financing"; when it sought ever-increasing power for the Executive; when it tried to "purge" members of Congress who had dared to disagree even with a small part of its program; when it attempted to pack the Supreme Court itself because that institution had stood in the way of changes it thought necessary. This was the period, also, when the President's weakness in matters of Administration began to reveal itself in the quarrels of many of its chief lieutenants; quarrels which have continued to this day.

This newspaper made its position clear in all these matters. It fought the Court-packing plan to the best of its ability. It opposed the "purgings." It repeatedly urged upon the President the necessity of reforming his methods of administration. It attacked the whole philosophy of "deficit-financing" by which the country was expected to grow richer by going deeper into debt. It opposed the increasing centralization of authority in Washington at the expense of healthy local government. It opposed the President's third term. It can accept a fourth term only with deep reluctance and strong misgivings, and solely as being justified by the alternatives actually presented to us in a year of war and crisis.

With all the major new policies of the second New Deal we have no sympathy. But when we weigh the balance on domestic issues we must ask: What alternatives do Mr. Dewey and the Republicans offer us?

In some respects we believe that an administration led by Mr. Dewey would do a better job in the domestic field than the three Administrations led by Mr. Roosevelt. After twelve years a new broom in Washington is badly needed.

We believe that Mr. Dewey has shown more interest than Mr. Roosevelt in establishing conditions under which business enterprise can prosper. We are confident that he would not make mistakes of the kind that Mr. Roosevelt made when he tried to pack the Court. He is more naturally interested than Mr. Roosevelt in the whole problem of administration and he could therefore be expected to make a better job of it. He has been a good Executive in Albany; in Washington he would certainly not tolerate the bickering which arises from divided authority and duplication of responsibility. We think he would remove incompetent officials promptly, instead of keeping them at their desks, praising their accomplishments, and creating new agencies to do their work.

These are all important points in the domestic picture. But they argued more strongly in Mr. Dewey's favor before the campaign started, before the Republicans wrote their platform and before Mr. Dewey began his speeches. There are now other factors in the domestic situation.

The first of these domestic factors is the tariff.

Throughout its whole career, and with special emphasis during the critical interlude between the two Great Wars, this newspaper has fought for the lowering of barriers to international trade. We believe that bold action today is needed here, not only for our own prosperity but in order to create the kind of world in which peace itself will have a chance to prosper.

What does the Republican party propose to do about the tariff?

It proposes to destroy Mr. Hull's multilateral trade-agreement plan, the most constructive experiment in tariff reform undertaken by this country in a generation. It proposes to replace this plan with a series of bi-lateral agreements. And it proposes to make even this narrow and inadequate program wholly self-defeating by requiring specific Congressional approval of every change that is ever made in any tariff item. The confusion of Republican thought on this issue is further emphasized by the fact that Mr. Dewey himself seemed at first to think that his party had endorsed, instead of scuttled, the Hull trade plan. More recently he has left the tariff issue severely alone.

There is not the slightest reason to believe that Mr. Dewey or his party is prepared or empowered to take constructive action on this important domestic issue, where constructive action is needed both to create new jobs at home and to lay the basis of a sound international economy.

The Republican party proposes not only to do away with one of the finest achievements of the Roosevelt Administration in the domestic field—the Hull trade agreements. It proposes also to emulate the Roosevelt Administration in some of its worst mistakes. This has become increasingly clear as Mr. Dewey's campaign has developed.

Mr. Roosevelt is running on a platform which calls for Federal expenditures at a high enough level to take care of all the Government's present subsidies and benefits and special factors to special groups, and to add some more besides. This is Mr. Dewey's program too. Among other things, he has promised social security for everyone.

Mr. Roosevelt is running on a platform which calls for full employment plus governmental intervention to keep wages at their wartime levels even though the effort to keep wages at their wartime levels may defeat this much-desired full employment because the consumer cannot pay the bill. This is Mr. Dewey's program too, announced at San Francisco.

Mr. Roosevelt is running on a platform which promises Federal made-work in sufficient volume to take up all the slack in unemployment in private industry, even though such unemployment results from a price level beyond the reach of the consumer or from other unsound governmental practices. This is a potentially vast promise to which no foreseeable limits can be set. It was also Mr. Dewey's promise at San Francisco.

Mr. Roosevelt is running on a platform which promises to subsidize the farmer from the public treasury, through taxes levied on the city workers who pay the higher prices which the subsidies are intended to establish. This is also Mr. Dewey's plan.

Mr. Roosevelt is running on a platform which will require a tremendous staff of civil servants—these are the famous "bureaucrats"—to perform the manifold public services to which the platform is committed. Mr. Dewey has specified no single existing Federal agency which he would do away with. He has suggested several new Federal agencies that he believes we should have.

The further the subject is pursued, the more difficult it becomes to see any sharp distinction between the stated position of the Republican party and the Democratic party on domestic issues of this kind.
