Mr. Barber's last Sunday here will be December 31. He will assume his new duties the first of the year.

The Leiper church is Mr. Barber's first pastorate. A graduate of Maryville College, Tennessee, 1958, and of Pittsburgh Theological Seminary 1961, he had served two student assistantships, one in the Sharon Community Presbyterian Church, Coraopolis, the other in the Northminster Presbyterian Church at New Castle.

During Mr. Barber's six and a half years here, the congregation has grown from 235 to 335, and the interior of the church was remodeled. The unicameral form of church government, whereby elders also serve as trustees, was adopted in 1963, a move that many feel has strengthened the

COLLEGE SUSPENDS CLASSES AS STUDENTS STUDY 480-PAGE REPORT

Swarthmore College, which does not have a reputation for taking academic concerns light-heartedly, is giving its students an early Christmas present. It is suspending classes for seven days beginning December 1.

This unprecedented gift of time is for a very special purpose: to afford time for the careful and thoughtful reading of three reports, which the college has just published, as the result of more than a year's deliberations by three groups which have been asking the question, "What kind of college do we want to be in the generations ahead and what kind of changes must we make to achieve these goals?"

In the Spring of 1956, Dr. Courtney Smith, president, announced the establishment of three fundamental and interrelated study groups to be composed of faculty, students, alumni, members of the Board of Managers, and of people knowledgeable in relevant fields who were not connected with the Swarthmore College community. A generous grant from the Danforth Foundation helped to make these studies possible.

Curriculum Study The first group, the Commission on Educational Policy. conducted a thoroughgoing study of the college's entire academic program, with no holds barred. The commission studied trends in secondary education that may affect the college's curriculum. It took into account that freshmen enter college better prepared now, that student values and motivations have changed, and that many students all over the United States claim their education lacks "relevance."

It examined the role of the teacher and scholar in the independent liberal arts college and the relation of research to teaching and to the curriculum. It took a fresh look at the Swarthmore Honors program (a special program of study for upper classmen leading to degree examinations set by examiners from other institutions) and at the needs of students who go on to graduate and professional schools.

"Swarthmore's record of achievement has been gratifying," President Smith said, "but we did not want this to keep us from examining our assumptions and procedures and considering what might give the college a still stronger academic program."

Library Policy

The second group, the Special Committee on Library Policy, considered these questions posed to it by President Smith:

"Are there ways to make a college library a more effective instrument in the learning process? Have we learned, ages ago, all there is to know about the uses of a library, or are there important discoveries to be made if we can break through the crust of habit and reexamine our assumptions?"

Student Life

The third group, the Special Committee on Student Life, spent the year considering Swarthmore's responsibilities beyond the provision of an academic program. As President Smith says in the preface to the three reports:

"We felt, further, that the current disputes about 'social rules' and 'student rights' on our campus and many others suffer because they are based on assumptions and premises that trustees, administrators, faculty members, and students have not examined together.

"Arguments focus on particulars of behavior, when what we all need is rather to consider and clarify our basic assumptions about the extent of a college's responsibility for standards of behavior."

480-Page Report

student behavior, and our assumptions about the bases for

The three study groups completed their job this fall and the 480-page report contains their recommendations. Now it is time, President Smith has said, for hard thinking and immediate involvement by all members of the college community. The week's suspension of classes provides the opportunity to read the reports and to think about them. Then special procedures which have been set up will enable the college community to break up into small discussion groups in which faculty and students can consider the recommendations together.

After these initial discussions, regular procedures of divisional and faculty meetings will follow, culminating in the faculty vote. Final action will rest with the Board of Managers.

Of General Concern

While the three reports look primarily at Swarthmore, the questions they try to resolve are similar to those confronting other independent liberal arts colleges.

"It is our feeling, says President Smith in the preface to the report, "that if the independent liberal arts colleges are to remain strong and grow in strength, they must analyze their educational problems realistically, anticipate future developments, and take appropriate steps promptly. Some hard thinking about basic academic issues needs to be done now, to define prospects and goals for the years ahead."

"We have, this year, the potential for significant change at Swarthmore, President Smith said. "If last year was our year of study," he continued, "I would like us to press to make this the year of decision, so that we can make next year the year of implementation."

College Cagers To Meet F & M Young Team Features New Coach, New Look

ay, December 1, 1967

Swarthmore College meets Franklin and Marshall at Lancaster in its first basketball game of the season today.

This year's edition of the Garnet team will feature a new look, with a new coach, J. D. "Ace" Hoffstein, and a tentative roster that includes eight freshmen. In addition to being younger than last year's team (there are no seniors on the squad), the team will be quicker and taller. Three of last year's starters have been lost, two by graduation and one by transfer.

At press time the lineup is fluid and no positions are set. Hoffstein thinks his team's biggest weakness will be its lack of experience, but it should make up for it in spirit and depth. He anticipates a definite improvement over last season's 5-11 mark, with stronger shooting and rebounding.

Hoffstein, who was high school "coach of the year" in Delaware in 1965, succeeds Robert Forwood, who retired last June.

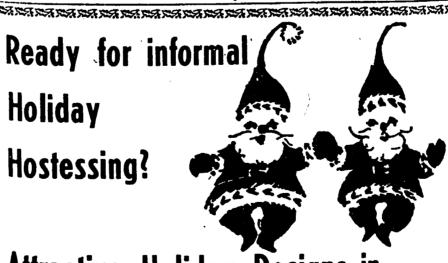

"Ace," was graduated from Upper Darby High School in 1940. After 44 months in the Armed Forces in World War II. he attended the University of Delaware from 1946 to 1950, where he played four sports, including basketball, and was the only 10-letter winner in the history of the university. After graduation he taught at the Santa Barbara, California, High School for a year and coached the varsity basketball team to an undefeated season. Returning to the East, Hoffstein taught in the Wilmington Public school system for four years, working with mentally retarded and slow-learning children. He also coached basketball at the Goldey-Beacom Junior College during this period. where he had a record of 96 wins and 14 losses.

For the past 11 years he coached at St. Elizabeth's High School, where his record was 120 wins and 38 losses. He had one undefeated season and won the independent conference championship three times. Hoffstein has conducted a high school basketball clinic in Wilmington for the past five years and has served as "color man" for Wilmington radio station WILM in broadcasts of high school and University of Delaware basketball games.

Saturday afternoon December 9, a small auto accident occurred near our shop on Park Avenue. As a result of this mishap there was quite a quantity of broken glass in the street.

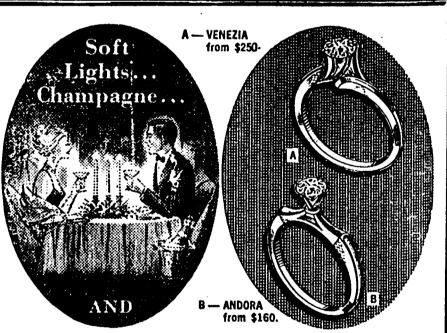

Two young boys noticed this glass and came into our store to borrow two brooms plus a dust pan.

The boys did a fine job of cleaning up the mess.

If the two boys - who were so alert and thoughtful - will be kind enough to come to our store and identify themselves, we lations on the birth of their first | would like to reward each of them with a small Gift Certificate.

He said it would serve for roller skating and could be flooded for ice skating in freezing weather. He suggested the measures as "tests" of the desires evidenced by residents in last summer's recreational survey

Association Needs YOUR HELP.

As Much As You NEED THEIRS. Can you imagine a Volunteer Fire Company answering an alarm with "So sorry. . .we can't afford to fight."

In the olden days, we're told, if you didn't display a "Fire Mark" on your house as evidence of financial support, the volunteer firemen would let the darned thing burn down.

We don't do it that way now. We answer EVERY call and do our level best to save EVERY property. We don't wait to check the "Dues Paid" file.

Wouldn't it be nice if EVERY family in town helped out by sending in a check for $10?

As of this moment less than half have paid their Contributing ting Membership dues. To those who have. . . our sincerest thanks. To those who, as yet, have not.

PLEASE DO!

Once Upon a Time -

THE SWARTHMOREAN

Christmas is a time of remembering. A Christmas recollection is related by philosophical "Countryman" Hal Borland in his recently published "Hill Country Harvest." By special permission, The Swarthmorean is able to say Merry Christmas with its reprinting:

"THERE was a tree, always. I don't know where they got an evergreen that size-it towered almost to the ceiling of the church....most of the people in my small town were from the Midwest and had to have a real pine, or fir, or spruce.

"There was the tree. It was set up in the church, as I say, down in front beside the pulpit, so the pews could hold everybody in town and give everybody a view. It didn't matter about sects. This wasn't a church Christmas. It was the community's Christmas.

"There was the popcorn, and there were the cranberries. For a week before Christmas half the kitchens in town smelled of popcorn. It was popped by the bushel. And Bill Hall, who ran the general store, ordered a barrel of cranberries. Half of them were sold for cranberry sauce, but half were saved for the tree. Then every kid big enough to use a needle was set to work. Popcorn and cranberries were strung, yards and yards of them. And the little kids, not big enough to do the stringing, made paper chains in school, yards and yards of paper chains, smeary with paste and smudgy with fingers, but every color of the rainbow.

"There was candy, hard candy, gumdrops, stick candy, red and green and frosty white. It came in wooden buckets, big buckets, and the grownups put it in paper bags. Paper bags of candy, at least two hundred of them, maybe three. And there were oranges. Oranges weren't everyday fare. You had to order them special, and Bill Hall ordered them, ten or twelve crates. "There were the gifts. Dolls for the girls, tin whistles and rubber balls for the boys.

I have no idea where they came from, but there they were, bushel baskets full of them. "There were candles. Every year there was the question about the candles. There were hose who said, "We won't go if there are candles on the tree," and there were those who said "We won't go if there aren't candles on the tree." So there were candles, and everyone went. But Clarence Smith supervised the candles, put them on the tree, and Earl Brown and Bob Probst sat in the front row with buckets of water handy, just in case. There never was a fire. "Christmas Eve was the time. Right after supper, with just time to clear away the table and put on the Sunday clothes. By eight o'clock the church was packed.

"The preacher, Adna Moore, opened the service. He went to the lectern and opened the big Bible to the book of Luke and began reading, "Now it came to pass in those days," and right on through the first twenty verses of the second chapter. He finished reading, spread his hands in quiet blessing, and nodded to Chris Straub, who took over. Chris said, "Thanks, Reverend. Now the girls will sing 'Holy Night' for us."

"A group of older girls giggled and sang "Oh, Little Town of Bethlehem." Chris said, "I guess the boys are going to sing 'Holy Night," and the boys giggled and sang "Deck the Halls." Chris said. "Confound it. everybody will sing 'Holy Night'!" And that time he had his way. Everybody sang "Holy Night."

"Chris kept watching the door, fidgeting. Finally there was the sound of sleigh bells outside. The doors opened and Chris said, "Al right, Ed. Come on!" Ed Schlote, the fattest man in town, appeared, waddled down the aisle, red-faced, red-suited, white-whiskered and beaming. But halfway down the aisle something happened. It wasn't Ed Schlote. It was Santa Claus. You could feel the wave of belief all over the church, in grownups as well as children. "He came down the aisle, paused to look at the tree with its popcorn and cranberries and paper chains and lighted candles, and he said, "What a beautiful tree!" His voice was awed. And everybody knew it was the most beautiful Christmas tree in the world. Then he turned to the boxes and baskets and began calling out names. He knew every child in town and he called them, one by one, to come down and get a bag of candy, an orange, a toy. It took forever, maybe an hour, but not once was there a break in that web of belief. And when he left, shouting, "Merry Christmas to all, and to all a good night!" the sound of sleigh bells hung in the cold, starlit night a long, long time. Listening now, half a century and 2,000 miles away, I can still hear those bells."

FIGHT TUBERCULOSIS -

Christmas is so many wondrous things, so many splendid, shining things to lift the spirit and the hopes of men. Even in these scarred times, when conflict in a distant alien land means tragic loss for hundreds upon hundreds of families here at home, yet is Christmas still — somehow — a warmth, a reassuring presence.

Now more than ever the human heart is humble and kind. Christmas is the joy heart-deep in the eyes of a sleep-warm child dazzled by the splendor of it all. Christmas is a slow and tender smile in a sleeping home as parents trim the tree and memories of all their Christmases together rush upon them. There is a force drawing families close. Holly wreaths are open eyes at windows. There's magic in the early morn, in the story of Bethlehem told the eve before.

This is Christmas. This is Christmas when the universe, a cathedral without dimension, its black dome sequined with stars, houses a hushed humanity. And the wonder and the glory are again. Now a man is tree-tall upon his knees. He reaches confidently beyond his grasp. His spirit climbs beyond the customary landmark of perception. He knows more than he can tell. All this is Christmas. May it be vours. Merry. Merry Christmas.

Garnets Split

Friday, December 22, 1967

The Swarthmore High Basketball Team split in their two games during the past week as they defeated Lansdowne-Aldan 68-54 and lost a thriller to Nether Providence 68-64.

The Garnets were paced by the scoring of Ed Wilber, Rick Luder and Tim Swezey as they came through with 21, 19 and 13 points respectively. Rick came through with his best effort of the current season as he led all rebounders with a total of 20, while Steve Shaffer and Branch Coslett did their usual fine job of harassing the opposing guards into many ballhandling mistakes.

Against Nether Providence the Garnets were again pared by their big frontline as Rick Luder scored 21 points and Ed Wilber and Tim Swezey chipped in with 16 and 14. Steve Shaffer, Branch Coslett, and Jay Reese did a fine job in the backcourt as they constantly broke through N.P's full court press. The Garnets ran into a cold spell in the final

Winter Maneuvers 'Harden' Troop 301

Troop 301 logged its second campout of the season in their program of training for next summer's 100-mile expedition along the Appalachian Trail. The site for this campout was the Delaware Valley Sportsman's Club in Media.

As they will in all of their training activities, the boys hiked to their campsite, packing in all food and equipment. Scoutmaster George Brown plans that each hike will cover programming by more distance, preparing the boys for their 10mile-a-day, two-week trek next summer. Assisting Mr. Brown on this campout were Assistant Scoutmaster Holbrook Bunting and two troop fathers Lee Gatewood and Eric Shaffer. The 30 large poinsetta plant. boys and the leaders slept under the stars.

Money is still being received from the troop's recent candy selling. 1/2 Million In SS To Borough Residents

Swarthmore residents wil receive over a half-million in social security benefits this year, according to Harry R. Peterman, Social Security District Manager.

Peterman made this announcement in observance of Social Security's 30th Anniversary. It was in December, 1937 that the local office, located at 5th and Market streets,

"There are now about 600 monthly checks," said Peter- lang. man, who is himself a Swarthmore resident. "When social security benefits first became payable 30 years ago, there were only 877 people in all of Delaware County who received

Swarthmore residents who re- bers have their reservations made for the ceive payments. The major reason is due to the large increase in population, and the fact that the Social Security Law has been expanded. The program was originally just for older people, but now includes benefits for young widows, children and disabled workers.

"It has been a privilege during the past 30 years to have served residents of the Swarthmore area," Peterman said "Monthly benefits are not only of great financial and psychological help to retired, bereaved, and disabled people, but they also provide purchasing power which aids businesses in the local area.

Animal Communication Subject for Symposium

Dr. Neal A. Weber, professor of zoology at the college, has arranged and introduced a program at the meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science held in New York yesterday.

The symposium in animal communication was sponsored by the American Society of Zoologists with the co-sponsorship of the Biological Society of America and Society Animal Behavior. The rapid expansion of research in animal communication has been the result of the collaboration of biologists with chemists, physicists, experimental psychologists and others together with the development of new apparatus that has greatly increased the efficiency of the investigators.

The smyposium served to highlight some of the significant advances and to bring together workers in diverse fields.

Maurice Moore, Bowdoin avenue, sexton at the Swarthmore Presbyterian Church for the past 25 years, was honored at a special reception following the Sunday morning worship on December 17. Mr. Moore and his wife Mary also received a check from the congregation. Mrs. Charles Hussey, wife of the interim minister, wrote the citation which she read to them and the assembly. The citation is as follows:

into out of the cold, into the warmth - Out of the darkness, into the light - Out of loneliness, despair and sorrow, into faith, hope, and love - A church is a place for prayer and praise, A place in which to meet God and our fellowmen. A church is a place of comfort, encouragement and cheer.

"For a quarter of a century Maurice Moore has helped this church to fulfill this mission. "Today in gratitude to God for his life and work, we honor him who throughout twenty-five years has given loyal and devoted service as the custodian of the Swarthmore Presbyterian Church.

This acclamation of our appreciation and esteem, with prayers for the blessing of God upon our beloved friends and co-workers is presented to Mr. and Mrs. Moore by the Swarthmore Presbyterian have recently moved from Sli-Church this 17th day of dell, La., to 501 Bryn Mawr December, 1967."

The station wagon, police said, then struck an eastbound car driven by George H. Evans, Wallingford, and continued through a high solid wooden fence into the rear yard of 628 Magill road, and another fence into 632 Magill, turned and stopped against the first fence.

Margaret Lenzi, Conshohocken, who became wedged under the dashboard of the Rathigan car was freed by Swarthmore and Springfield police. She suffered cuts of the left leg and was taken to Tri-County in Media ambulance for treatment along with Maureen who sustained head cuts. Morton police transported the Knapp child. Springfield Fire Company was called to wash spilled gasoline from the highway. The Knapp and Rathigan cars re-
